Elyasi said the delay in completion of the assessments has not been due to poor management but it has been due to “overload” of work. “We have been working every day with no exception, but the dimension of the issues is very much complicated,” he added.

The head of the High Peace Council’s secretariat, Umer Daudzai, at a press conference on Saturday, called on the election commissions to announce the final results of the parliamentary elections.

The last October’s parliamentary elections were plagued by alleged corruption and fraud which resulted in removing all of the election commissioner with the hope that the new formation will practice free and fair presidential elections in Afghanistan which is scheduled for late August.

Elyasi added that the delay in completion of the assessments has not been due to fewer activities but it has been due to “overload” of work. “We have been working every day with no exception, but the dimension of the issues is very much complicated,” he added.
