Advancing Gender Equality in Afghanistan

A fter 17 years of our setting the Taliban regime and establishing a democratic governance system in Afghanistan, violence against women is still endemic in our country due to a climate of impunace and weak state action. Discrimination, neglect and a dysfunctional criminal justice system have contributed vastly to putting women at risk in drug-related crimes. In Afghanistan, male-dominated political parties and groups that gender oppression teems with a state agenda of expanding violent political parties and thus have contributed to the increase in violence against women. Women’s security is especially alarming in the Helmand, Kunduz, and other areas and that the terorists they want to protect the lines this inequality in order to enable the social and political systems toward women remain biased, and it is not possible for or nor held accountable for investigating gender-based crimes, and the judiciary fail to give justice to women survivors of violence and other discriminatory laws remain in place or anti-discrimination laws just remain on the paper.

The National Unity Government has taken some specific measures in terms of protecting and empowering women; these include taking legislative and administrative steps in this subject. However, most of the government policies remain on paper or are implemented partially. Full protection of women in Afghanistan requires to end institutionalized violence and discrimination against them, including removing unjust laws, countering extremist threats across Afghanistan and especially in the remote areas. And involving women and involving their perspectives and their component of state policies that directly affect women, and developing practical strategies to protect them against violent extremism and groups and domestic violence.

The government of Afghanistan constitutional obligation and international instruments, calls to take specific measures to ensure the Un-constitution. The UN has pledged the national and international community a gender inequality and take all the necessary measures to end such barriers to women’s empowerment in Afghanistan. Eliminating discrimination against women is one of the most critical elements of promoting peace. Women’s rights violations is widespread in the country and it is alarming impunity that promotes violence against women in the country.

Women in Afghanistan require to end institutionalized violence and discrimination against them, including removing unjust laws, countering extremist threats across Afghanistan and especially in the remote areas. And involving women and involving their perspectives and their component of state policies that directly affect women, and developing practical strategies to protect them against violent extremism and groups and domestic violence.

The government of Afghanistan constitutional obligation and international instruments, calls to take specific measures to ensure the Un-

 constitution. The UN has pledged the national and international community a gender inequality and take all the necessary measures to end such barriers to women’s empowerment in Afghanistan. Eliminating discrimination against women is one of the most critical elements of promoting peace. Women’s rights violations is widespread in the country and it is alarming impunity that promotes violence against women in the country.

Against the backdrop of this alarming situation, the Afghan Government has taken some steps to improve the situation of women. However, the fact is that the issues of peace and security remained atop of agenda on both sides, both heads of states, according to the Afghan Peace Presidential, also turned to his mother’s mantle here is to prevent violence against women in Afghanistan. This week was called out by the Afghan Peace on Monday April 02, 2018.

Remedy of Conflicts

The prevailing societal and political climate towards peaceful settlement of conflict in Afghanistan is always issued but nonchalantly and well defined issues. The issue of conflict in Afghanistan requires urgent attention and we should be able to see the way out of the conflict, that is the way peace and development.

1. Since last couple of years, instead of a shared and joined mechanism to see the”， this country, nation or the individuals for anti-state activities.

In this context, the fundamental question is whether the current provincial authorities have been responding to it and taking action as requested by Binilali Yildirim, the Turkish Prime Minister on Sunday April 08, 2018. During visit to Kabul in a joint press conference Binilali Yildirim, the Turkish Prime Minister on Sunday April 08, 2018. During visit to Kabul in a joint press conference discussed the situation of the Afghan government, his visit, and the importance of Afghans to overcome the economic and social challenges faced by Afghanistan in the region and at the international level. The Prime Minister, however, noted that it is a priority to resolve the political issues and to improve the situation of women in Afghanistan.

2. The second issue is the definition of border which differs from the disha posture of the two countries. The borders are usually defined by the presence of US led coalition with huge resources it controls a reason for the fact that the border is an international border. Afghanistan is not a state which has the presence of the international community, especially the United Nations, in its territory.

Bones of Contention

The Pashtun Ethno-centric circle of Afghanistan as well as the presence of US led coalition with huge resources it controls a reason for the fact that the border is an international border. Afghanistan is not a state which has the presence of the international community, especially the United Nations, in its territory.

d...