Qatar Seeks to Transform Diabetes Care with ‘Whole Nation’ Project

Valletta, Malta – Malta has signed a deal to distribute among four IDPs the vaccines that will be used in the country’s campaign against diabetes. The government said it plans to launch a national diabetes strategy that will focus on prevention, early detection, and treatment. The country is one of the few in the region to have a significant prevalence of the disease, with an estimated 3.5% of the population affected.

Qatar has been working to improve its healthcare system and reduce the burden of chronic diseases like diabetes. The country has invested heavily in healthcare infrastructure and is expanding its coverage to more citizens and residents. The government has set ambitious targets for reducing the prevalence of diabetes and other non-communicable diseases. The deal with Malta is expected to help Qatar achieve these goals more efficiently.

Former IMF Senior Official expects China to Play Big Role in Improving Global Governance

WASHINGTON - It is an important moment for the world to focus on improving global governance, according to former International Monetary Fund (IMF) chief Christine Lagarde. Speaking at the IMF’s annual meeting, she called for a “stable and predictable” international economic environment that supports growth and development.

Lagarde, who served as the Fund’s managing director from 2011 to 2019, said that the current global economic order is not yet fully stable and that more work needs to be done to strengthen the global financial system. She said that the COVID-19 pandemic has highlighted the need for greater coordination and cooperation among countries to ensure a stable and resilient recovery.

Lagarde called for a strengthening of the global financial safety net, noting that the Fund’s resources have been increased to support member countries in times of crisis. She also emphasized the importance of sustained and inclusive growth, highlighting the role that trade, investment, and technology can play in achieving these goals.

Lagarde’s remarks come as the IMF and World Bank are preparing for their annual meetings, which will bring together policymakers, business leaders, and civil society representatives from around the world to discuss the global economy’s challenges and opportunities.

Key to Open Another One-year, China-Related, with Conditions

PONGYANG, North Korea – North Korean leader Kim Jong Un met with Chinese Premier Li Keqiang on Monday to discuss ways to strengthen the two countries’ strategic partnership.

Li said the two leaders shared a strong sense of understanding and a desire to further strengthen the China-North Korea strategic partnership. He noted the two countries had a shared vision and mission of promoting peace and prosperity on the peninsula and in the region.

Li also expressed China’s support for North Korea’s peaceful nuclear program and its commitment to denuclearization and peace on the Korean Peninsula. He said China would continue to work with the international community to bring about a peaceful resolution of the North Korean nuclear issue.

The meeting comes as North Korea has faced growing international pressure to abandon its nuclear weapons program. The United States and other countries have urged North Korea to denuclearize, while China has expressed its willingness to support a peaceful resolution of the issue.

Both leaders underscored the importance of bilateral cooperation and the need to deepen trade and economic ties. They also discussed the ongoing pandemic and the need for international cooperation to address the crisis.

If We Lose WikiLeaks, ‘We Lose A Whole Spectrum of Freedom’

WASHINGTON - The US attempt to provoke WikiLeaks founder Julian Assange into election meddling is a “hostile” move, according to WikiLeaks journalist Peter Zvonkovic.

Zvonkovic, who was arrested in May 2019 and is currently facing charges in Sweden for hacking a government website, said the US attempt to extradite Assange to the UK is a “hostile” move by the US government.

He said the US government is trying to stifle the publication of political intelligence and other materials that are in the public interest.

Zvonkovic said he was concerned about the US government’s efforts to stifle freedom of expression and the publication of political intelligence.

He said the US government’s efforts to extradite Assange were a “hostile” move and a “rejection” of freedom of expression.

Zvonkovic said he was not sure if the US government would succeed in extraditing Assange.

He said he was hopeful that the international community would support the publication of political intelligence and the protection of freedom of expression.
