Functions and Operations of Political Parties

By Mohammad Zahir Akbari

Politics is the process of organizing how we live together in a society, and the political parties are the organizations that aim to make this a better place for people to live together. They are interested that their children should do well at school, they are interested in the well-being of the children. Some parents think that once their children start going to school, they can relax and enjoy; however, researches in this regard show that parents have an even larger influence on their children’s academic results than the schools. Most of a child’s ability to intercon- nect, to share with teachers and peers and their attitude to learning, is shaped from home. Parents can’t, without a tinge of doubt, assist largely in their children’s education. Let us see what we mean by forming their educa- tion and tutoring at home.

Things as simple as baking a cake with their children can help par- ents in the education of the children. Measuring the ingredients for a cake is a basic form of mathematics. Another way of assisting your children in basic mathematics is simply planning to buy different things that are required at home; for example, eggs, glasses, oranges, bags, and so on. Children often find these real-life experiences very much helpful and through these examples they can solve their math- ematical problems. Parents can also support their children with their Math, to give them pocket money. It, necessarily, does not have to be a large sum of money, and they may be required to choose a task. This not only teaches them about the value of money, but they may be required to bring in their basic Math so as to work out how long they will have to save in order to be able to buy the special toy that they want. This implies that children are improving their sense about money, and at the same time their Math skills.

Reading to children at an early age can already prepare them before they start school. However, parents should not only read to children when they start going to school. They, mostly, like to be read to, particularly different stories and it can help to increase their vocabu- lary as well. Parents can also improve their children’s reading skills by facilitating them with reading opportunities. Parents can read their children’s books, magazines, sign or anything else of their interest. Making children learn the alphabet while they are young, can also benefit them with their spelling and reading. Making children use the right equipment with their education. Giving them a noiseless place where they can read, work and do homework, with a bright reading light and a comfortable chair and desk, are just some of these things. Parents can also assist their children by showing them some reference books, and any other pertinent learning material they might require. There are different ways that parents can support their children in communicating with them. Let me tell you that if you want to bring your children closer, then you must begin by letting their children answer the phone and order food and contribute in family- ly discussions by interacting and communicating with siblings so that they can experience varied situations where different types of conversations are a regular part of the day. Parents and students should do this by using correct speech themselves, and help them to learn how to do so.

Parents can also help with society and environment in a number of different ways. For example, they can show their children how the scale and legends on a road map help to determine different routes. This way, children can practice what they are learning. They can do assignments, but they have to be careful that they do not do the same thing as the teacher.

Science is everywhere around the world and of great importance; therefore, helping children with this subject is essential and it is not very difficult. The world of science is so wide that it is hard for us to make it a garden for example is giving a basic scientific education. The way we can help our children with this subject is to let them do a small experiment in one way or another, and teaching young children about these things is way easier. They are not frightened because they associate them as children. Health starts from an early age, and teaching children basic health things at home will help them when they start to go to school. Parents can teach their children about food, exercise, and rest and this will help them in forming these things as related to it. Parents can also teach their children the importance of safety rules, hand washing and caring for teeth, all of which are all necessary for knowledge for children. Of course, parents need to teach and children need to learn, to ensure the education of their children. As revealed, there is a multiplicity of dif- ferent things that parents should do to help their children with their education. Of course, there are many more things that parents can do. If parents do not do any of these things, you can easily see how far their problems start to increase. Let me tell you about some of the problems that parents if some parents do not. If parents do not do any of these things, you can easily see how far their problems start to increase. Let me tell you about some of the problems that parents if some parents do not.

Globlization and its New Discontents

By Ehmed Stiglitz

Five years ago, I wrote a little book, entitled Globalization and its Discontents, describing growing opposition in the developing world to the corporate globalization that had begun in the 1970s. The rising protests against the globalization of markets, with its associated international financial institutions, had brought on the 2008 financial crisis, while lowering ordinary citizens’ living standards, had started to put a question mark on the model of the social contract that maintained an open society – open to globalization and to the participation of citizens. The collapse of the social contract was an event of global importance and had far-reaching implications for the future. The consequences of the crisis were far-reaching and global. More and more, the political parties that were once held responsible for increasing inequality and undermined overall economic performance; growth actu- ally slowed as the rules of the game were rewritten to enrich their own interests. With the collapse of the social contract, political parties were no longer seen to be in the interests of the citizens and its core objectives. In this regard, I would like to draw attention to a new discontents that has emerged in the last five years: the globalization of political parties.
