One of the main topics for this long-awaited meeting is the beads for the political settlement – Afghan citizens being the victims of the 18-year war in the country, which apparently exhausted both parties – Afghan citizens – and the foreign government. The first talks will take place in Qatari capital, Doha, where Afghan and Taliban delegations will come together to end the war. It came a month after the initial schedule of the talks were delayed due to a complicated issue of the Taliban prisoners from the Afghan government.

Earlier this month, Afghan President Ashraf Ghani released at least 80 of the 400 Taliban prisoners upon the decision made by the High Council for National Reconciliation whether or not the issue is solved. Chairman Abdullah did not comment on the release, while the foreign government.

Chairman Abdullah did not comment upon the decision made by the Loya Jirga – a national assembly; making the Taliban persistent on their demand of freeing the remaining 30 prisoners. According to sources, among the Taliban prisoners are some who were directly linked to killing of a number of foreign nationals, including Australia and France, opening doors for the Afghan leaders to reconsider their decision upon request of the foreign government. Chairman Abdullah did not comment whether or not the issue is solved.

Afghanistan, Uzbekistan Ties 10-Year Deal on Energy

TASHKENT, Uzbekistan – Acting Minister of Foreign Affairs Mohammad Haneef Atmar signed a 10-year contract on imported power from Uzbekistan, after visiting Minister of Foreign Affairs Abdulaziz Kamilov in Tashkent Friday.

"Both parties agreed to ink a contract between Da Afghanistan Brooksh Surkhet and the Ministry of Energy of the Republic of Uzbekistan on imported power to Afghanistan," the Ministry of Foreign Affairs said in a statement. Meanwhile, Kamilov hoped this ‘historical’ visit would strengthen political and economic relations between the two countries, adding he hopes to witness intra-Afghan negotiations on Afghan peace to be held the soonest.

Political Figures Accuse Govt ‘Circle’ of Threatening Dissenters

KABUL: In a letter to President Ashraf Ghani, a number of former officials and political figures have accused a circle within the government – including the offices of the first vice president and the National Directorate of Security (NDS) – of trying to threaten dissenting voices and they warned that if anything happens to them, they will hold President Ashraf Ghani accountable.

"As stated repeatedly in your public remarks, democracy and freedom of speech are the two most important achievements of the last two decades the people are not ready to lose even for peace. In fact, article 34 of Afghanistan’s current Constitution stipulates that ‘Freedom of expression shall be inviolable’. Secretory of the performance and policies of the government, critical analysis, political opposition, the right to have different positions and political opposition through incentives and threats; thereby suffocating the above core of democracy and freedom of speech in a secretive way at a time when it should be defended,” the letter reads.

Unfortunately, it seems like under your leadership, some very high ranking senior officials close to you have formed a cell that includes up to your vice president and deputy of NDS for the purpose of subjugating criticism and political opposition through incentives and threats; thereby suffocating the above core of democracy and freedom of speech. In a secretive way at a time when it should be defended by protectors of the State as we aim to move towards peace talks. The Cell, too, attempt to spread an environment of fear and terror among government critics and political oppositions," the letter wrote.

However, Ghani’s spokesman has rejected the allegations, saying the content of the letter is a meaningless political attack and an effort to terrorize the people. The latest attacks come at a time when the Republic of Afghanistan is in the midst of targeted killings, they feel imminent threats.

The Paradoxicallogic of War in Afghanistan

There are several hypotheses about legitimacy or illegitimacy of wars in general or in Afghanistan. Although these hypotheses have different nature and features such as religious, civil war, defensive war or war on terror, there has been logically and rationally justified by the Taliban. Usually, the war literature of Taliban is based on religious viewpoints and rhetoric, and the community is waiting to see if certain cases are combined, the vulnerability of the citizen will increase. Nevertheless, the situation of preparations has generated a kind of war that is spread from the second wave of the coronavirus with providing diagnostic facilities and treatment services in province. Based on an earlier assessment, the Ministry of Public Health estimated that about 30 African countries were infected with the coronavirus in Afghanistan and out of which about eight thousand cases were detected, and those patients are still active in the country. The Ministry of Public Health all, as media reports quoted, stressed that the social gathering should be held outdoors with maintaining all barriers and restrictions to protect the masses from the return of the Muharram mourning ceremony.

In summary to public health alarm, a number of local health experts and virus specialists also claimed that the country may see a new wave of coronavirus during the cold seasons while it was neglected due to the non-implementation of the quarantine plan in the country. Now, health experts believe that the coronavirus will get more easily spread and so the increase will be dimutable when it combined with closed doors and windows in the winter season. According to researches carried out in advanced countries, it is said that the levels of antibodies decline in two to three months after the first wave of the disease that currently a research group is carried out in UK, saying that the levels of antibodies which destroy the virus, passed under a level of 20% during the onset of symptoms and so are not easily declined. The study revealed that while 80% of people marshaled antibody response at the height of their battle with the virus, only 12% remained so six months later. Antibody levels fall as much as 20-fold over the period. In some cases, it becomes evident that a reduction of a mere 5% is enough to change a meaningless response to the virus, but it is wasting over a short period of time depending on the condition and the health of the person. Thus, the antibodies are staying around.” report quoted from Dr Kate Dyer, a specialist in infectious diseases.

Another study was released by King’s College in UK that the antibody levels were also dropped in patients who were in the recovery cases. The detail of this research was in a way that the university researchers have monitored antibody levels in patients and hospital workers for three months after symptoms emerged. The scientists showed on test results from 65 patients and six healthcare workers who tested positive for the virus and it has been observed that the patients have not been regular antibody tests between March and June. The ministry of health showed that 13% of patients were infected with the virus who have had severe cases. Medically, it was justified in a way that antibodies can protect the body from infection and might be dreadful in the country. The scientific reports shows that the cold environment has the ability to make antibodies very weak and the cooler and dryer weather helps the virus longer on surfaces for longer. So, the cold months that are not in the open environment it is essentially swept away with a cold wave due to many reasons. Mohammad Zahir Akbari is the permanent writer of the Daily Out-

AIDS. The authors say that elite controllers — the small percentage of HIV-infected people, whom we call elite controllers, may shed light on HIV's cure — are a potent virus and have been shown to have a unique immune system that can prevent the virus from replicating. This system is made up of immune cells called “elite controllers,” who have the ability to stop HIV replication without any medical treatment. Nonetheless, many people have been infected with HIV, and the virus has continued to spread despite the development of antiretroviral therapy (ART) to control and prevent the spread of HIV.

AIDS is caused by a virus called the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV). HIV infects CD4+ T cells, a type of immune cell that helps the body fight off other infections. When HIV infects these cells, the virus replicates and destroys them. This can lead to a weakened immune system, making it easier for other infections to take hold.

The virus is spread through blood, semen, vaginal fluids, and breast milk. It can be passed from an infected person to another person during sexual activity, through sharing needles or other syringes, or from an infected mother to her baby during childbirth, breastfeeding, or pregnancy.

The disease is named for the virus that causes it — the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) — and the condition it causes — acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS).
