British May Continue with Some EU Cooperation Post-Brexit: Johnson

LONDON - British Prime Minister Theresa May will press ahead with key areas of cooperation with the European Union after Britain's decision to leave the bloc, a government official said last week.

Sources within No. 10, the prime minister's official residence, said the official, who declined to be named, said Mrs. May would pursue collaboration in areas where it was in the UK's interests.

With the EU's chief negotiator, Michel Barnier, due to be in London on Monday, an official said Mrs. May would meet the EU's chief Brexit negotiator at the Chequers meeting this week.

Britain will continue to work with the EU on energy, environmental protection, health and transport, and may pursue closer relations in areas like financial services, a source added.

A meeting between Mrs. May and Barnier on Monday is expected to set the terms for a more focused approach to the negotiations, according to the source.

Foreign Secretary Boris Johnson said last week that the UK was keener to work with the EU on issues of common interest and less on those where it is很难说有。The government has stated that it will continue to work with the EU on energy, environmental protection, health and transport, and may pursue closer relations in areas like financial services, a source added.

A meeting between Mrs. May and Barnier on Monday is expected to set the terms for a more focused approach to the negotiations, according to the source.

Foreign Secretary Boris Johnson said last week that the UK was keener to work with the EU on issues of common interest and less on those where it is likely to have a weaker negotiating position.

A meeting between Mrs. May and Barnier on Monday is expected to set the terms for a more focused approach to the negotiations, according to the source.

Foreign Secretary Boris Johnson said last week that the UK was keener to work with the EU on issues of common interest and less on those where it is likely to have a weaker negotiating position.

A meeting between Mrs. May and Barnier on Monday is expected to set the terms for a more focused approach to the negotiations, according to the source.

Foreign Secretary Boris Johnson said last week that the UK was keener to work with the EU on issues of common interest and less on those where it is likely to have a weaker negotiating position.

A meeting between Mrs. May and Barnier on Monday is expected to set the terms for a more focused approach to the negotiations, according to the source.

Foreign Secretary Boris Johnson said last week that the UK was keener to work with the EU on issues of common interest and less on those where it is likely to have a weaker negotiating position.

A meeting between Mrs. May and Barnier on Monday is expected to set the terms for a more focused approach to the negotiations, according to the source.

Foreign Secretary Boris Johnson said last week that the UK was keener to work with the EU on issues of common interest and less on those where it is likely to have a weaker negotiating position.