In today’s world where society has evolved and the patterns of human interactions have become complicated, it is difficult to find people who would opt for a way of living that may neglect the social interactions and communications. However, such behaviors exist and, in modern world, where digital social interactions are becoming less frequent and the family seems to be distanced from the world, social isolation has become an important issue.

Social isolation is often involuntary, where the people who suffer from social isolation are involved in it unintentionally. It basically gave rise to a behavior that is not motivated by social gatherings and would avoid them away from them. Though people having social isolation have loneliness, it is not the same as loneliness, since loneliness can be for a short period of time whereas, isolation can be for a longer period of time with a higher degree and intensity.

Social isolation is a matter of concern because it has the potential to give rise to many other social and psychological issues. The effects of social isolation then themselves differ in different ways among different people. Some become so much frustrated that they may start activities that can harm them or even others. Criminal behavior and psychological problems are in many cases the result of social isolation. Therefore, it is a matter of concern for the society as a whole. There can be different reasons of isolation. Especially, in modern world of communication where human beings have been largely mechanized, the feeling of solitude and loneliness are very much common. The convenient use of modern technology has made human beings distant from each other — this is what most of the sociologists and psychologists believe. However, there are some who argue otherwise. They believe that the use of internet and mobile phones actually bring human beings close together. With the advent of online-social networking communities, there are increasing options to do social activities that do not require real-world physical interaction. They believe that the social sites, chat rooms, message boards, and other types of communities are now meeting the need for those who would rather stay home but still manage social interaction through developing communities of online friends. But modern research suggests that the use of modern technology, for whatsoever purposes it is used, may make the users even more isolated or depressed.

Some of the other reasons of social isolation may include mental disabilities, living alone or grieving for the loss of a close one. Some even suggest that social isolation may also be a genetic issue.

The effect of social isolation can be detrimental to a large extent. Continuous and recurring social isolation that may last for a long period of time can prove to be very harmful and may lead into a chronic condition. The people suffering from such a condition have no one to turn to in their personal emergencies, no one to divide during a crisis, and no one to measure their own behavior against or learn etiquette from — referred to sometimes as social contract. The condition increases the chances of suicide and depression as it makes the peoplebehaveandadaptontosuchbehavior.

In conclusion, we should not neglect the importance of social interaction and communication with other people. The main purpose of social interaction is to foster friendly social relations that may be important to our daily life and social interaction with other people helps to develop our social skills.

By Dani Rodrik

There can be different reasons of isolation. Especially, in modern world of communication where human beings have been largely mechanized, the feeling of solitude and loneliness are very much common. The convenient use of modern technology has made human beings distant from each other — this is what most of the sociologists and psychologists believe. However, there are some who argue otherwise. They believe that the use of internet and mobile phones actually bring human beings close together. With the advent of online-social networking communities, there are increasing options to do social activities that do not require real-world physical interaction. They believe that the social sites, chat rooms, message boards, and other types of communities are now meeting the need for those who would rather stay home but still manage social interaction through developing communities of online friends. But modern research suggests that the use of modern technology, for whatsoever purposes it is used, may make the users even more isolated or depressed.

Some of the other reasons of social isolation may include mental disabilities, living alone or grieving for the loss of a close one. Some even suggest that social isolation may also be a genetic issue.

The effect of social isolation can be detrimental to a large extent. Continuous and recurring social isolation that may last for a long period of time can prove to be very harmful and may lead into a chronic condition. The people suffering from such a condition have no one to turn to in their personal emergencies, no one to divide during a crisis, and no one to measure their own behavior against or learn etiquette from — referred to sometimes as social contract. The condition increases the chances of suicide and depression as it makes the peoplebehaveandadaptontosuchbehavior.

In conclusion, we should not neglect the importance of social interaction and communication with other people. The main purpose of social interaction is to foster friendly social relations that may be important to our daily life and social interaction with other people helps to develop our social skills.

By Dani Rodrik

Does Europe Really Need Fiscal and Political Union?

There is a growing sense in Europe, among conservatives and progressives alike, that fiscal and eventual political union are necessary to ensure the survival of the euro. The sharing of fundamentals, such as monetary discipline or political unity, does not mean that the euro is a success. There can be instances where the euro might be a failure. However, the euro is not a complete failure. There are some success stories where the euro has been successful. But there are also some failures where the euro has been a failure.

By Hujjatullah Zia

P eace negotiation between Afghan government and the Taliban is a long-interrupted issue. The war has been fought by both sides over peace talks for many years. But both the sides have not been able to come to an agreement. Today, the Taliban have been able to claim that they have taken over the control of many areas in Afghanistan. It is very clear that the Taliban have been able to come to power in Afghanistan against the global war on terror peace process. On the other hand, a Pakistani high-ranking officer Sandhu has said peace will not be possible with the support of Pakistan in the international community. He said that instead is committed to allow it to help the Afghan reconciliation process. So, Afghanistan government believes in Pakistan’s leverage over the Taliban and left no more chance for the Taliban’s negotiation.

It goes without saying that Pakistan is playing an essential role in terms of negotiation through putting pressure on the Taliban. During his meeting with the Pakistani officials, the US Secretary of Defense James Mattis emphasized the vital importance of working with the United States and other countries to facilitate a peace process in Afghanistan that is acceptable to the Afghan people. Despite this fact, the Taliban hold out against the talks and continue to attack the government against faith that this nation. Showing no tendency to hold talks, the Taliban refuse to meet the US. Since the authorization of the National Unity Government (NUG), the Taliban have carried out several attacks against the Afghan soldiers and civilians. They never decided to attend peace meetings, which underlined the effect of regional and global conferences on peace negotiations.

The world also seeks to bring the Taliban to peace table. A group of officials believes that peace talks can only be possible if the Taliban would be the only visible option to security. Uzbek President Shavkat Mirziyoyev supported Afghan negotiations and said that the talks would be the only viable way to ensure peace and stability in Afghanistan. As the Taliban and Afghanistan are now meeting the need for those who would rather stay home but still manage social interaction through developing communities of online friends. But modern research suggests that the use of modern technology, for whatsoever purposes it is used, may make the users even more isolated or depressed.

Some of the other reasons of social isolation may include mental disabilities, living alone or grieving for the loss of a close one. Some even suggest that social isolation may also be a genetic issue.

The effect of social isolation can be detrimental to a large extent. Continuous and recurring social isolation that may last for a long period of time can prove to be very harmful and may lead into a chronic condition. The people suffering from such a condition have no one to turn to in their personal emergencies, no one to divide during a crisis, and no one to measure their own behavior against or learn etiquette from — referred to sometimes as social contract. The condition increases the chances of suicide and depression as it makes the peoplebehaveandadaptontosuchbehavior.

In conclusion, we should not neglect the importance of social interaction and communication with other people. The main purpose of social interaction is to foster friendly social relations that may be important to our daily life and social interaction with other people helps to develop our social skills.

By Dani Rodrik

How to Bring the Taliban to Peace Table?

By Hujjatullah Zia

Peace negotiation between Afghan government and the Taliban is a long-interrupted issue. The war has been fought by both sides over peace talks for many years. But both the sides have not been able to come to an agreement. Today, the Taliban have been able to claim that they have taken over the control of many areas in Afghanistan. It is very clear that the Taliban have been able to come to power in Afghanistan against the global war on terror peace process. On the other hand, a Pakistani high-ranking officer Sandhu has said peace will not be possible with the support of Pakistan in the international community. He said that instead is committed to allow it to help the Afghan reconciliation process. So, Afghanistan government believes in Pakistan’s leverage over the Taliban and left no more chance for the Taliban’s negotiation.

It goes without saying that Pakistan is playing an essential role in terms of negotiation through putting pressure on the Taliban. During his meeting with the Pakistani officials, the US Secretary of Defense James Mattis emphasized the vital importance of working with the United States and other countries to facilitate a peace process in Afghanistan that is acceptable to the Afghan people. Despite this fact, the Taliban hold out against the talks and continue to attack the government against faith that this nation. Showing no tendency to hold talks, the Taliban refuse to meet the US. Since the authorization of the National Unity Government (NUG), the Taliban have carried out several attacks against the Afghan soldiers and civilians. They never decided to attend peace meetings, which underlined the effect of regional and global conferences on peace negotiations.

The world also seeks to bring the Taliban to peace table. A group of officials believes that peace talks can only be possible if the Taliban would be the only visible option to security. Uzbek President Shavkat Mirziyoyev supported Afghan negotiations and said that the talks would be the only viable way to ensure peace and stability in Afghanistan. As the Taliban and Afghanistan are now meeting the need for those who would rather stay home but still manage social interaction through developing communities of online friends. But modern research suggests that the use of modern technology, for whatsoever purposes it is used, may make the users even more isolated or depressed.

Some of the other reasons of social isolation may include mental disabilities, living alone or grieving for the loss of a close one. Some even suggest that social isolation may also be a genetic issue.

The effect of social isolation can be detrimental to a large extent. Continuous and recurring social isolation that may last for a long period of time can prove to be very harmful and may lead into a chronic condition. The people suffering from such a condition have no one to turn to in their personal emergencies, no one to divide during a crisis, and no one to measure their own behavior against or learn etiquette from — referred to sometimes as social contract. The condition increases the chances of suicide and depression as it makes the peoplebehaveandadaptontosuchbehavior.

In conclusion, we should not neglect the importance of social interaction and communication with other people. The main purpose of social interaction is to foster friendly social relations that may be important to our daily life and social interaction with other people helps to develop our social skills.