The Uncertain Scenario

The approach of the people and intellectuals towards the socio-political scenario in Afghanistan seems divergent and there are not very certain attitudes in this regard. There are many “do’s” and “hurts” and the opinions regarding the situation are very shaky.

Especially in the last some months the situation seems an abnormal one as to where the country is landing and what would be the future of the socio-political scenario in the region. Though, since the downfall of Taliban there have been major contributions on the part of international communities. Further, to help the country in overcoming its socio-political and security crises, there has been enormous effort made on the part of several countries.

Unfortunately, however, apart from the financial assistance and technical support, there has been no sustainable political effort to overcome the socio-political and security crises.

Above all, this effort should be directed towards the wellbeing of all. Concerns appropriately there has to be immense effort made on the part of all on the part of all.

In order to address the socio-political and security crises, adequately address corruption and wastage to counter-insurgency objectives, devise better mechanisms to ensure freedom and prosperity to all.

The impact of international assistance will remain limited unless do something directly to solve the root causes of the socio-political and security crises. There are three basic sectors which require special attention. They are the education, health and employment sectors.

The education sector is a powerful tool to empower the people of the society and provide them facilities on their door steps. The health sector has been very weak and institutions serve the authoritative people on the basis of the top bureaucratic hierarchy.

The employment sector is a powerful tool to reach to the core of the people of the society and provide them facilities on their door steps. They include income generating projects, job opportunities for the people, the income generating projects, infrastructure projects, social security projects, etc.

The fundamental problem which needs to be addressed is the power that lies in the hands of a few. The fundamental problem is the power of the people. There have been severe problems with the power of the people.
