Belarus’ Leader Slams Russian Talk of Taking over His Nation

Minsk, Belarus - The leader of Belarus has accused the Russian government of trying to control his nation, and vowed that he would not let it happen.

Belarusian President Alexander Lukashenko on Saturday described as “a hostile act” the Russian government’s announcement that it would deploy military personnel and equipment in the region.

The Belarus president said the move was an attempt to destabilize the situation in Belarus.

“I tell you loud and clear that the Russian government’s announcement is a hostile act,” Lukashenko said in a televised address during a meeting of a Moscow-appointed, democratic-乃是 among the latest signs of a growing tension between the two countries.

Lukashenko on Friday said the Russian government had warned Belarus that it would not be able to take control of the region.

The Belarusian government has repeatedly signaled its intention to continue its support for the region.

Russia Claims US Offer an ‘Nebulous’ Word

While the embassy move is widely seen as a victory for the Trump administration, and the White House said it was a “major win” for President Trump, many have criticized the move as an act of aggression.

The U.S. claims Russia is in breach of the treaty, and other leaders have expressed concern that the move could lead to a military conflict.

Fake News Vs Fact in Online Battle for Truth

FARR – Since US President Donald Trump used the term “fake news” during his campaign, the phrase has gone viral, used worldwide as a way to dismiss stories around the world to deserve news reports that do not suit his sense of the truth.

Fake news continues to defend their work, false information is saturating the politi- cal debate worldwide and undermining the ability to trust the media and institutions.

The global media has been hard hit by the “fake news” phenomenon, which has been spreading across the world.

The New York-based United Nations has warned that the trend is “increasingly visible in attempts to manipulate public opinion.”

Fake news is defined as any story that is intentionally false or misleading, and it can be by individuals, organizations, or even whole nations.
