Ghani Assures All Issues to be Considered in Peace Talks

KABUL - President Ashraf Ghani on Saturday inaugurated the Ministry of Interior’s new building, close to the Hamid Karzai International Airport in Kabul, and assured security forces that their presence, professionalism and independence will be taken into account during peace negotiations.

Stressing the need for stability in the country, Ghani said peace is a priority for all Afghans and that the war has been imposed on the country. He said government is trying to leave no stone unturned in bringing peace and stability in Afghanistan.

Ghani thanked all security force members for their sacrifices which have helped secure the country, and said he is particularly worried about the families of women police officers for having allowed them to join the ranks.

Ghani stated that Afghanistan’s relations with its true friends are based on common interests and the world can witness this. He also thanked U.S President Barack Obama for having decided to keep troops on the country through 2016 and said that the U.S is indispensable to Afghanistan.

New Council Pushes Govt. on Reforms and Loya Jirga

KABUL - As hopes for electoral reforms gather momentum, the new Council for the Protection and Stability of Afghanistan has asked leaders of the National Unity Government (NUG) to keep their promises to the nation regarding electoral reforms and the convening of a Loya Jirga.

However, amid mounting pressure on the NUG, members of the commission over-wintering the implementation of the agreement on the formation of the NUG said it will not be possible to convene the Loya Jirga on time, arguing that the nation’s parliamentary and district council elections still have to be held. Formed by ex-Jihadi leaders and former senior government officials, the Council for The Protection And Stabili ty Of Afghanistan has said that the NUG, formed more than a year ago, needs to take action.
