People Losing Confidence in the Government

The performance of a state or a particular government can be judged by the services, facilities and opportunities that it provides to its people. If it fails to provide the necessary requirements of life, such as security and opportunities, its performance and legitimacy is always questionable. Only the governments that are able to ensure good governance to its people, can establish stability and legitimacy, and expect its people to have trust and confidence in it. Thus, people's perception of government is an essential indicator to see how well the government has performed in delivering its promises of not only better governance but also security to all the people of Afghanistan.

It is really important that government must discourage the discriminatory behavior by the male colleagues who would not feel comfortable in having talks with the national leaders and bosses to have a trust and confidence in them. The approval of Constitution, which has been already signed by the majority of men and women in presidential election in 2014 filled the void in the Minds and hearts of the national leaders and government. But could the ballot paper of people be fraud?

The Taliban insurgents were reorganized and waged war against the government and did not come true since violence and bloodshed began. A peace deal was signed between the Taliban and the US in 2020. However, the country continues to face issues of insecurity and lack of development. Women have been intensely influenced by these factors. Most of the self-made journalists opened their own stations in their villages. Young graduates from the developed countries, who visited far better in security arrangements and lifestyle standards, took refuge there and now live more peaceful life.

The young generation is an able and energetic population, who have the capacity for overcoming their responsibilities in the country. However, the situation is the same in perspective of the overall situation. The security environment and major issues make the decision of returning for them a very difficult one. Furthermore, if the individuals who returned after a ten-year period, they came back for social reasons, they cannot find the same social conditions as a whole. It is also justifiable that they are the ones who become the target of the terrorism in the area. There have been many instances wherein Afghan government has visited other countries for training and development but never has invested on the Afghan journalism. The Taliban regime, however, restored democracy through casting their votes and enjoyed their participation in the government but could the ballot paper of people be fraud? The implementation of this peace deal can serve as a model for other countries as well. The young generation is of utmost importance and the unique assets for the stability of their country. Afghanistan's future development depends on the support of the international community and the Afghan government.

The Afghan society still lacks the modernity and development it needs in order to reach to a respectable position. The Afghan social structure has been intensely influenced by these factors. Most of the self-made journalists opened their own stations in their villages. Young graduates from the developed countries, who visited far better in security arrangements and lifestyle standards, took refuge there and now live more peaceful life.

The Afghan media environment has particularly benefited from educational and employment opportunities they have, and how are important solution toward lessening the issues. If the youth are inspired to contribute to rebuilding efforts. If they are educated, they can be addressed, they can bekidnapped, eventually they can fill the prisons or the leave the country. Last year with the implementation of the peace agreement with the Taliban, the agreement has been implemented.
