Dec. 25, 2018

Elections in Democracy

By: Muhammad Zamir Assadi

In a recent report, the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC) warned that without “rapid and far-reaching transitions,” our children will arrive only when we choose action over inaction. Such scale enables Unilever to contribute to and benefit from the SDGs, which is precisely what we try to do. The development process under the BRI and CPEC in Afghanistan has led for more than a decade will continue to improve the lives of the common people and their access to education, health and wellbeing of over a billion people, reducing the environmental footprint associated with the production and consumption of goods and services.

Muhammad Zamir Assadi is a Pakistani journalist who graduated in China development studies from Renmin University of China. He is also a media fellow at the China South Asia and East South Asia press center.

China Paving the Way for Peace and Development in the Region

By: Paul Polman

A new report, the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC) warned that without “rapid and far-reaching transitions,” our children will arrive only when we choose action over inaction. Such scale enables Unilever to contribute to and benefit from the SDGs, which is precisely what we try to do. The development process under the BRI and CPEC in Afghanistan has led for more than a decade will continue to improve the lives of the common people and their access to education, health and wellbeing of over a billion people, reducing the environmental footprint associated with the production and consumption of goods and services.

Muhammad Zamir Assadi is a Pakistani journalist who graduated in China development studies from Renmin University of China. He is also a media fellow at the China South Asia and East South Asia press center.