Targeted Killings Threaten Peace Process: Khalilzad

KABUL - US special envoy Zalmay Khalilzad condemned recent targeted attacks in Afghanistan and those attacks must stop and they threaten the peace process.

“They failed to suffocate the voice and views had changed,” said President of the republic team said.

Khalilzad said that the Taliban’s ideology is the same ideology which has been announced in relation to the peace process, and the group’s intentions for Afghanistan’s future. They said that the Taliban continue to talk about the Islamic politics and the political system, however, they are not able to come with a clear definition about it.

Members of the republic team also said that the Taliban’s ideology has not changed, developments in the Western media that the group’s ideas and views had changed.

“The Taliban has the same view that has 25 years ago about women, music, arts, electronics, freedom of speech and human rights,” Khalilzad said.

The US continues to condemn recent targeted attacks in Afghanistan and those attacks must stop and they threaten the peace process.

Republic Team: Taliban’s Islamic Republic System

KABUL - Members of the peace negotiating team representing the Islamic Republic of Afghanistan have said that the Taliban has so far failed to define their political system which has been announced in relation to the peace process, and the group’s intentions for Afghanistan’s future. The team said that the Taliban continue to talk about the Islamic politics and the political system, however, they are not able to come with a clear definition about it.

Members of the republic team also said that the Taliban’s ideology has not changed, developments in the Western media that the group’s ideas and views had changed.

The US continues to condemn recent targeted attacks in Afghanistan and those attacks must stop and they threaten the peace process.

Quote of the Day

“Where there is much violence there is no way to live. It breeds a climate of fear. Fear will drive more Afghans to leave their homeland. Who will then be left to advocate for rights and freedoms? This is not the way a society will thrive and prosper,” Khalilzad said.

He said the Afghan people demand peace and a constructive and political settlement remains urgent. “I urge the negotiating parties to reconcile their efforts. We stand ready to help,” Khalilzad added.

VP Danish: Enemy Attacks Meant to ‘Create Chaos’

KABUL - Afghanistan’s Second Vice President Mohammad Sarwar Danesh, referring to the recent spate of targeted killings in the country, said on Thursday that the enemies of Afghanistan are attacking the achievements of the nation.

The enemy has targeted the nation’s gates to create fear and chaos and disappointments, or to provoke the people and create an atmosphere of worry and panic to score points in the peace process or to push the Taliban stalemate,” said Danish at the National Human Rights Defender Conference.

Danish said “the enemy” has attacked rule of law, human rights, freedom of speech and human rights defenders.

Targeted Attacks Won’t Serve Taliban’s Leverage Wish: Andarabi

KABUL - Interior Minister Masoom Andarabi said on Thursday the Taliban had turned their guns on civilians following their failure on the battlefield this season.

Taliban attacks have increased in Kabul and some provinces lately, Andarabi said the attacks could be prevented through implementation of security programs.

The interior minister said Taliban attacks met with resistance and they failed in Helmand, Kandahar and other parts of the country to capture any area.

He claimed the Taliban’s 2020 fighting season was a failure as they had been unable to capture.

In the last elections, many Afghan voters lost their fingers due to participation in a democratic process. These actions show that they have no logic, as they use violence to silence the voice of democracy and freedom while the government has no ability to defend from democracy and supporters of the country.

Why the Tree of Democracy Never Grows up in Afghanistan?

Although democracy is the most important factor in modernization and development of third world countries, it has not produced any positive outcome in Afghanistan. Now, two decades after nurturing the tree of democracy, every morning we began our morning with mourning of another journalist. The flag bearers of the democratic movement in the country are the latest victim of democracy was Yusaf Rashid, the head of FIFA, who tried to negotiate for implementation of law and fair elections in the country. Given the current chaotic conditions, these actions are not the first, but they are dead against the rules and laws that neither is local nor is national. In the last elections, many Afghan voters lost their fingers due to participation in a democratic process. These actions show that they have no logic, as they use violence to silence the voice of democracy and freedom while the government has no ability to defend from democracy and supporters of the country.

Democracy is the failure of democracy in Afghanistan is due to the involvement of Taliban and Talibans-like people which is neither compatible with principle of democracy and nor acceptable for the people of Afghanistan. Although everything has changed after two decades in the country, the mentality of these people has not changed yet. Roughly equal masses in a statement of integration with which one can be closely in touch with Taliban, they have the same mentality about government, women, human rights and freedom of expression, and so forth, that had 20 years ago. Instead of converting people with knowledge and logic, they try to remove the main barriers of absolution with using violence. In recent months, dozens of democratic media activists who were considered the major supporters of democracy have been assassinated across the country. Unfortunately, the government has frequently failed to protect its political activists. Fifteen continuous days, the people will live up with democracy, presence of foreigners is the main support for democracy.

As the five and survival of people are more important than everything, the people may turn back to the government and system which provide no freedom and security but on the other hand will save their lives. The government should fulfill their duty on the basis of law with commitment. By providing security for citizens and simplify tell them to protect themselves, it will create a wide opportunity between citizens and the government. If the security officials understand the situation and simply tell them to protect themselves, it will create a wide opportunity between citizens and the government. According to the commission, the number of female journalists in 2019 was 1,200, but this number was expected to increase in the future. The commission called on the Afghan government to take measures to protect the rights of women's rights activists and journalists.

During the peace process, the percentage of women journalists has increased, but their challenges remain. The peace process has brought some positive changes, but the situation for women journalists remains difficult.

In conclusion, it is clear that the women's rights activists and journalists in Afghanistan still face serious challenges. The Afghan government needs to take urgent action to ensure their rights and safety. The international community can play a significant role in supporting the Afghan government in this regard.
