Violence against Women Persists

By Muhammad Zahir Akbari

The United Kingdom’s vote to exit the European Union and Donald Trump’s election as US president exposed a new mood of populism and protectionism, polarizing much of the Western world. The two events have been compared to the 1929 Wall Street crash and the Great Depression of the 1930s, with China and India set to inherit the leadership of an reordered world. But the world is not the same; it is far more human to stress on commonalities and universals, and to stress on differences. Even the general spirits are almost the same; it is far more human to stress on commonalities and universals, and to stress on differences.
