KABUL - President Ashraf Ghani on Wednesday paid a visit to Afghan-Japan Communicable Disease Hospital in Kabul.

Ghulam Mohammad Tahir Formuli, head of Afghan-Japan Communicable Disease Hospital, says, “There is no problem in the diagnosis and treatment of patients. We have the required number of staff. In case of God forbid, we would continue. Ghani promised to continue.

KABUL - Analysts familiar with the situation said that the main cause of the civil casualties are the insurgent groups – the Taliban and the ISIS – and partially, the Gent groups – the Taliban and others – are responsible as well.

President Ghani ordered the Kazakhstan to continue aiding Afghan people and groups.

KABUL - On February 4th, 2020, the first special care center to fight coronavirus was established in Afghanistan-Japan Communicable Disease Hospital in Kabul.

China and Afghanistan Working Together to Win the Battle Against the Virus

By: Wang Yu

Recently, a sudden outbreak of novel coronavirus pneumonia emerged in China. All Chinese people have made great sacrifices to confine themselves to efforts to this end. Afghanistan, as a close neighbor of China, is also facing the coronavirus. As Chinese ambassador to Afghanistan, I have been closely following the trend of the coronavirus and its prevention and control measures related to Afghanistan government and the media. Thus, I would like to try my best to inform Afghan friends of the latest situation of the virus in China.

For the government of China, outbreak containment is of paramount importance now. President Xi Jinping, as the leadership mentioned, made important initiatives. Acting with a high sense of responsibility to people's health, the Chinese government has taken the most comprehensive and strict prevention and control measures after the outbreak of the epidemic, of which many have exceeded what International Health Regulations required. We make the best use of the socialist system's advantages, which enable us to concentrate resources to accomplish large-scale fee-skipping and mobile medical services for the fight against the epidemic. It is a miracle of building the Huoshenshan Hospital in 10 days and the toughing story of more than 20,000 medical workers readying to help Wuhan. The difficulties and dangers have demonstrated China's conviction and courage in reality, defeating the epidemic.

China has also been actively fulfilling its international obligations for the sake of global health and security. The recent connections China made in China, the Chinese government, acting in an open, transparent and responsible manner, has been sharing timely information with its citizens and the international community, informed WHO of the epidemic situation immediately, shared the virus-genetic sequence with WHO and other counterparts, the timely manner of antiviral medication, the sharing and seeking stronger cooperation with the world. According to a WHO report, as of February 5, there are about 135 confirmed cases of COVID-19 outside China, which is less than 1% of the number of cases in China. In addition to Afghanistan so far, in 2019, the H7 N9 in the US spread to 214 regions and countries, reached 4.6 million, the number of deaths reached to 162, which is 2.1%, much lower than that of the 2009 H1N1 flu and other previous outbreaks. This shows that China has done its best and taken the most powerful measures to contain the epidemic, which shows the real power of China, to control and protect the lives of people around the world. Another good news is that since February 5, the number of cured patients in China has exceeded the number of deaths in 2009, the first time in 48 years that China has exceeded that milestone. In the epidemic, China has been leading the world. At present, the cure rate is still rising, and it is believed that we will see the turning point soon. The Chinese government and people are united, and we have the confidence, abilities and resources to win this battle to the end.

Third, the Afghan friends also have confidence in China's war against the epidemic. The ups and downs of democracy in Afghanistan

ECC Announces Decisions on Hundreds of Thousands of Disputed Votes

KABUL - Afghanistan’s Electoral Complaints Commission (ECC) on Wednesday announced its decisions about hundreds of thousands of disputed votes from September 28 presidential election.

On the 137,630 suspicious votes, Shinwari said 65 percent of the votes were recorded will be audited. If 65 percent of the votes were recorded will be validated if 65 percent of the polling stations were subject to special audit.

She said that at all such votes will be validated if 65 percent of the polling stations are found to have biometric records, journals and result sheets, and if not, all the polling stations where such votes were recorded will be audited.

On the 102,012 votes outside polling hours, 1,103 polling stations (15 percent) of 3,097 stations where the votes were recorded are subject to special audit.

On the difference between the number of votes in result sheets and biometric devices in a polling station, Shinwari suggested that votes from such a station are valid if there is a difference of 5,000 votes.

She also said that head of election office in Panjsher and administrative manager of the office were fined 10,000 afghanis each respectively. Moreover, votes from four polling stations in Faryab were invalidated, she said.

The group asked all stakeholders to ensure that their work was independent and free from interference. "We remind all candidates and their supporters of their obligations under the law and the Code of Conduct. Above all, stakeholders must refrain from any actions that could lead to instability, or compromise the credibility of the electoral process," the ESG said.

Until the final election results are certified and a new government formed, the guiding principles of the National Unity Government (NUG) must continue to prevail. "This is essential for the unity of the government and its ability to pursue important goals such as peace and economic growth, and for the cohesion and neutrality of the security forces," the ESG said.

ESG Asks Election Bodies to Act Impartially

KABUL - The Election Support Group (ESG) on Tuesday said it recognized the patience all Afghans displayed awaiting the announcement of presidential election results and asked the electoral bodies to act impartially.

"Safeguarding the integrity of the electoral process is paramount. It has required considerable resources and time," the group said in a statement, adding it noted recent statements by electoral authorities that they will shortly announce important decisions on appeals adjudication process.

We are committed to supporting the efforts of all stakeholders working to protect the integrity of the electoral processes and the will of Afghan voters," for candidates and voters to retain confidence in the process and the outcome, both the Independent Election Commission (IEC) and the Electoral Complaints Commission (ECC) must ensure that their work was impartial, transparent, open to public scrutiny and compliant with the relevant laws and regulations," the ESG said. "We urge the electoral management bodies to ensure that the election is completed in a timely manner.

The group asked all stakeholders to respect the electoral process and let the commissions perform their work independently and free from interference.

"We remind all candidates and their supporters of their obligations under the law and the Code of Conduct. Above all, stakeholders must refrain from any actions that could lead to instability, or compromise the credibility of the electoral process," the ESG said.

While the government and its ability to pursue important goals such as peace and economic growth, and for the cohesion and neutrality of the security forces," the ESG said.

Despite goodwill gestures from the Taliban and declining interest among Americans, it is important that the United States remains in Afghanistan, Keane said.

Over the past 18 years, he said, the US has made tremendous progress at preventing another attack on the US from al-Qaeda originiating from Afghanistan. Keane also said his sources in Afghanistan say the Taliban wouldn’t win a single district in the event of an election.

The people absolutely do not want them because they’re living under their boot," Keane said of the Taliban. "They’re living under their tyranny. They’re living under the fact that they can’t educate their children."
