(1) Afghanistan government...

"No power in the country can dis- solve the government," said Chabibi, when asked if the government was ready to "stand and defend our country." "Rest assured that no one can push us out of power," he added.

With both sides hailing progress in talks in Qatar last month, U.S. peace envoy Zalmay Khalilzad had said due to meet Taliban representatives there again on Feb. 14. Chabibi was one of the most energetic since he met Khalilzad in Kabul last week after the meeting was suspended.

He said on Twitter early on Wednesday that Afghanistan's peace process had been "enduring partnership" with Afghani stan. A political party was "unswerving" and would remain until a lasting and inclusive peace was in sight, he said. (Reuters) has a unique opportunity to make a positive and constructive offer to the Afghans to create an atmosphere that will lead to a positive outcome. The Afghan response should match this offer with its own steps towards a political solution. The Afghan government and the Taliban must engage in direct talks to find a peaceful resolution.

(2) Pakistan's...

Chabibi said he would support the Afghan government in all its efforts for peace in the region. He also reaffirmed Pakistan's commitment to help Afghanistan and its people.

Speaking at a gathering with the Taliban, he said that Pakistan was ready to play a crucial role in strengthening Afghanistan's security and stability.

The suspension of U.S. security assistance to Pakistan remains in place, according to the CENTCOM report. Pakistan's government has been under pressure to change its attitude towards terrorism and extremism.

The Afghan government has been criticized for its slow progress in the peace process. Reconciliation efforts have been met with skepticism and opposition from some Afghan politicians and civil society groups.

As a state possessing nuclear weapons, it is crucial for Pakistan to work towards a peaceful resolution of the Afghan conflict. The suspension of U.S. security assistance creates an opportunity for a comprehensive approach to the security and stability of the region.

(3) Moscow talks concludes...

The third day of the Moscow talks concluded on a promising note as participants expressed views about the peace process.

The gathering was convened by ai Han Hamid Karzai at an attempt to bring the warring parties in Afghanistan together for peace talks.

The delegates share views: "The atmosphere of the talks (on the first day) was very constructive," said Mohammad Mohaj, the second deputy of the CEO Abdul- lah Abdullah. "The second and third days were also very constructive and the good atmosphere would continue until the next meeting on Friday.

The important thing is that we don't bargain about positions here, we are looking for new solutions that wom en in Afghanistan are respected, as we human rights holders, I feel that the Afghan people listened to this voice. I think their views were changed to some extent but we have to carefully watch the situation," she said.

"(4) Afghanistan government...

(5) Ex-president Hamid Karzai told Stanikzai, who told participants that the Afghan nation's demand was the Afghan nation's demand as well. "The Afghan nation's demand was the Afghan nation's demand as well."

Stanikzai also termed the yesterday's meeting as productive and constructive and hoped to conclude talks within a few days. The Afghan government and the Taliban should continue until the end of May, he said. "I am hopeful about the outcome of our discussions. I hope we will have fruitful results because we had almost similar views during the discussions and this could be a 'model of optimism for future.'"

Jamiati-islami party chief executive and former Balkh governor Atta Mohammad Noor also expressed hope about positive out- come of the Afghan talks. "I had a very productive meeting with the Taliban," he said. "The Afghan talks today had two good points, first it was a very productive meeting and prominent figures sat face to face and had a good discussion, I am hopeful that the peace talks continue. Former deputy chief executive officer Mohammad Mohajaq also expressed similar views and also addressed the meeting.

He said the Moscow meeting was productive good inside the country and people widely supported the talks on social media.

"To all the members of the Mazar-e-Sharif police and expert contingent of the conference," said "To all the members of the Mazar-e-Sharif police and expert contingent of the conference," said. "Others political formations, I also took part on the upcoming meeting and held detailed discussions with Taliban representatives in preparation for the upcoming meeting."

The commission would work very effectively with the Taliban and the countrymen would have a positive result from our meeting," (Pajhwok)

(6) We have an Accelerated...

Party and it could do the same with the Taliban under an Afghan-owned and Afghan-led dialogue. "We will start the peace process in Afghanistan," he said. "The peace process will start with the Afghan government and the Afghan Taliban.

The financing agreement of the armistice between the Taliban and the Afghan government has been signed and the World Bank totally worth $255 million. It will be implemented to support economic emergency service delivery and institutional reform," said the acting Finance Minister, Haneef Atmar.

"The new financial package includes $200 million grant to the Afghanistan Investment Support Facility (AFISF), $150 million grant to the Afghan National Defense and Security Forces (ANDSF), $100 million grant to the Afghan Government for the Afghan National Police (ANCOP), $50 million grant to the Afghan Government for the Afghan National Army (ANA), $50 million grant to the Afghan Government for the Afghan National Health Services (ANHS), $25 million grant to the Afghan Government for the Afghanistan Reconstruction Trust Fund (ARTF), and $10 million grant to the Afghan Government for the Afghan National Development Network (ADN)."

(7) $255 Million...

We all of us agreed on the withdrawal of foreign forces and the government participation in the government and making a constitu- tion - an Islamic constitution," he added.

On Tuesday, former president Hamid Karzai said the existence of a genuine government was vital in terms of negotiating a settle- ment to the ongoing conflict. "The Afghan government should be con- cerned on the need for the Taliban to engage in dialogue with government," he said.

Delegates share views: "We understand that the govern- ment in Kabul needs to be part of these negotiations, we wish that they would have been here today," said Ashraf Ghani, the President of Afghanistan. "Our cooperation is an issue that the Islamic Move- ment of Taliban and the Afghan government, and even the Taliban themselves have recently been held down. We have spent more than $7 billion in the Middle East," he said.

"As a candidate for President, I proposed a new approach. Great progress has been made in the Middle East."

(8) No Ceasefire...

We have very good cargo planes," he added. "We can come back very quickly, and I'm not leaving. We have a base in the area and the base is a fantastic edifice.

"With whom, what will they agree upon there? Where is their executive power? Let hundreds of politicians attend the Moscow talks and are not officially repre- sentatives by phone from U.S. Sec- retary of State Mike Pompeo asking for a "meaningful" and "enduring partnership" with Afghani stan."

"(9) Government Says Moscow Talks Hold No Weight...

The Afghan government says that Moscow talks hold no weight in the country's conflict resolution process. The Afghan government reiterated that the talks should be conducted in Afghanistan.

Hold No Weight

Former vice president Mohammad Ashraf Ghani said Moscow talks had no weight in the country's conflict resolution process. "Sales of weapons have been suspended, and we should resolve our problems through intra-Afghan dialogue," he said. The Afghan government is committed to the Moscow talks, which have no authority.

Earlier this week, President Ashraf Ghani said the Afghan government is committed to the Moscow talks. "The Afghan government supports the Moscow talks and we will have to wait and see what they agree upon there? Where is their executive power? Let hundreds of politicians attend the Moscow talks and are not officially representatives by phone from U.S. Secretary of State Mike Pompeo asking for a "meaningful" and "enduring partnership" with Afghanistan.

(11) Bridge building...

The meeting is a step towards promoting unity and trust among the Afghan people. The meeting was a historic opportunity for the Afghan government to build trust with the Afghan people.

"You should always be prepared to take any step that is possible. The Afghan government is committed to bridging the gap between the Afghan government and the Afghan people.

We will achieve that goal, which is peace forever in Afghanistan," said Prime Minister Lee Hsien Loong.

Another delegate attending the talks was Fawzia Koofi. She said: "There were some 13 articles on women's rights."

As a woman, we can work, women can be educated, women cannot be presidents - that is a "particular thing."

"The important thing is that we are not going to argue about what positions we have. We have understood that wom en in Afghanistan are respected, as we human rights holders, I feel that the Afghan people listened to this voice. I think their views were changed to some extent but we have to carefully watch the situation," she said.

"The atmosphere of the talks (on the first day) was very constructive," said Mohammad Mohaj, the second deputy of the CEO Abdul- lah Abdullah.

As a state possessing nuclear weapons, it is important for Pakistan to work towards a peaceful resolution of the Afghan conflict. The suspension of U.S. security assistance creates an opportunity for a comprehensive approach to the security and stability of the region.

(14) Ajmal Ahmadzai...

He has eight years of experience in investment management with the Khazan Capital Markets and has also marketed and Bobo Amherst Hamilton, World Bank, EM Group, US Treasury Depart- ment and Ministry of Finance of Afghanistan. (KP)

February 07, 2019