A political system requires accountability. A accountable system is one in which governmental institutions are answerable to the public and to their civil society counterparts. The institutions in Afghanistan, on the other hand, have had this lack of accountability as a result of the war. The political system in Afghanistan has suffered from this lack of accountability, which has led to the rise in corruption, which is now out of control.

The political system in Afghanistan is characterized by three key features: the separation of powers is not clear and the judiciary is independent. The lack of accountability in the political system means that the judicial and law enforcement agencies can do whatever they want without being held accountable for their actions. This has led to a situation where the judicial system is seen as corrupt and unreliable.

The political system in Afghanistan is also characterized by the lack of transparency and rule of law. The political system is often accused of being corrupt and unaccountable. Transparency and rule of law can be maintained when there is proper separation and allocation of power. The political system is characterized by the separation of powers, which means that the political system is characterized by a check and balance system.

In Afghanistan, the political system has failed to deliver on its promises. The political system has failed to deliver on its promises to the people, and this has led to a situation where the political system is seen as corrupt and unreliable.

The political system in Afghanistan is also characterized by the lack of transparency and rule of law. The political system is often accused of being corrupt and unaccountable. Transparency and rule of law can be maintained when there is proper separation and allocation of power. The political system is characterized by the separation of powers, which means that the political system is characterized by a check and balance system.

In Afghanistan, the political system has failed to deliver on its promises. The political system has failed to deliver on its promises to the people, and this has led to a situation where the political system is seen as corrupt and unreliable.

The political system in Afghanistan is also characterized by the lack of transparency and rule of law. The political system is often accused of being corrupt and unaccountable. Transparency and rule of law can be maintained when there is proper separation and allocation of power. The political system is characterized by the separation of powers, which means that the political system is characterized by a check and balance system.

In Afghanistan, the political system has failed to deliver on its promises. The political system has failed to deliver on its promises to the people, and this has led to a situation where the political system is seen as corrupt and unreliable.