Ex-Governor of Bamyan Wins Peace Award

T hroughout the document, there are several news items related to issues in Afghanistan, notably the potential empowerment of women in the region. The document highlights the challenges faced by Afghan women, such as the lack of access to education and employment opportunities, and the societal norms that restrict their movement and participation in public life. The document also stresses the need for a comprehensive strategy to address these issues and highlights the role of international organizations, such as UNDP, in supporting women's empowerment in Afghanistan.

In the document, Habiba Sarabi, the deputy chairperson of the Afghan High Peace Council, is mentioned as a notable figure in women's empowerment efforts. She has been awarded the Nobel Peace Prize for her work in promoting women's rights and peace in Afghanistan. The document also mentions the importance of coordination among international organizations, such as UNDP, to support women's empowerment efforts in the region.

The document also discusses the impact of the Islamic State on the region and the need for a coordinated response to address this threat. It highlights the role of the Islamic Republic of Iran in supporting the Islamic State and the need for a coordinated strategy to address this issue.

The document concludes with a call for continued efforts to support women's empowerment and to address the challenges faced by Afghan women. It emphasizes the importance of international cooperation and support in achieving these goals.