The recent agreement reached between the leaders of Ukraine and Russia in the Minsk discussions has provided a window of opportunity for the OSCE mission to resume its work in Ukraine. However, the implementation of the Minsk agreements faces significant challenges, including the ongoing conflict and the lack of trust between the parties. The OSCE mission needs to maintain its presence and work closely with the international community to support the implementation of the Minsk agreements and help to bring an end to the conflict.