Educated refugees and children in conflict zones is one of the key challenges facing the world today. The recent crisis in the Middle East has made the situation even more complex. Schools have been closed, and many children have been forced to leave their homes. It is estimated that there are over 50 million children who are currently attending school in the region. However, many of these children are not able to continue their education due to the ongoing conflict. Some of them have been forced to flee their homes and are now living as refugees in countries around the world. Others remain in their home countries, but their schools have been closed due to the conflict. In order to ensure that these children have access to education, it is important that we work together to find solutions. One possible solution is to provide online education to these children. This could be done through the use of technology, such as video conferencing, which allows students to connect with teachers and other students in real-time. In addition, it is important that we provide these children with the resources they need to succeed, such as books, pencils, and other learning materials. By providing these children with the opportunity to continue their education, we can help to ensure that they have a bright future. This is a priority for the United States, and we are committed to working with our partners to find solutions to this important challenge.