US and Allies Discuss New Sanctions on Russia over Ukraine: Kerry

WASHINGTON - Pentagon officials are throwing their weight behind a new strategy to recapture the vital resort town of Mariupol from the ISIL-based terrorists, while a senior US military officer told the Daily Beast that they were now talking with their British counterparts about how to respond to the allegation but has already refused to comment further on the specific details of the plan.

Speaking at a press conference, US military officials publicly outlined their strategy to regain control of Mariupol, the second largest city in southern Ukraine, less than a day after it was taken by Russian-backed separatists.

“I don’t really out it in terms of a full-fledged military operation,” one military officer told the Daily Beast, adding that they were now talking with their British counterparts. “We are talking about additional sanctions and a military plan to retake the city,” the officer said.

The talks are expected to take place in London later this month, according to a senior US military official.

However, the official did not specify the details of the plan, but it is understood that the US and other Western countries are preparing to increase military aid to Ukraine and to provide training to the Ukrainian military.

INBrief - Pakistan’s Taliban attack: Seven people were killed and 15 others wounded when a commando of the Frontier Corps Pakistan (FCP) was killed in an attack by Taliban terrorists.

The commando, who was on duty near a checkpoint, was killed when the terrorists attacked the checkpoint with a STG-77 machine gun.

The incident came just weeks after the Taliban had launched an attack on a police station in the city of Quetta, killing 12 people.

The Taliban have been active in Pakistan for several years, carrying out attacks on police and security forces, as well as targeting local officials and government buildings.

In recent months, the Taliban have been targeting security forces in various parts of the country, including the northwestern province of Khyber Pakhtunkhwa, where the attack took place.

The attack is likely to escalate tensions between Pakistan and the Taliban, who have been fighting for control of the country’s northwestern region for decades.

The Taliban have been trying to establish a foothold in Pakistan for several years, and have been supported by some of the country’s political leaders.

However, the attack is likely to be met with a strong military response from the Pakistan government, which has been fighting the Taliban for decades.

The Pakistan military has been accused of failing to effectively fight the Taliban, and some experts have suggested that the military’s failure to take a strong stance against the Taliban is one of the reasons for the insurgency in the country.

In recent years, the Taliban have been gaining strength in Pakistan, and have been able to establish a significant presence in several parts of the country.
