KABUL - India congratulated President Ghani on his victory in the presidential election as the President of Afghanistan. In his foreign ministry, in a statement, said that India remains committed to continuing work with the new government to expand strategic partnerships, support in fighting terrorism, and for an enduring and inclusive national peace and reconciliation.

The statement writes, “India supports the democratic aspirations of the people of Afghanistan and remains committed to continuing work with the new government and the democratic polity in strengthening our bilateral strategic partnership in fighting the scourge of externally sponsored terrorism and for an enduring and inclusive national peace and reconciliation which is Afghan-led, Afghan-owned and Afghan-controlled.”

Through the statement, India encourages the new Government and all political leaders in Afghanistan to work on strengthening national unity and to promote inclusivity and protect the rights of everyone.

The long-delayed results of the presidential election were eventually revealed Tuesday, February the 18th, by the Independent Election Commission - pronouncing Ashraf Ghani as the re-elected President of Afghanistan. Since then, Ghani has been criticised by some presidential candidates including Abdullah Abdullah, who came second with 39.52%, contested the result, declaring Ashraf Ghani as based on fraudulent votes. But his main rival Abdullah Abudullah, who came second with 39.52%, contested the result, declared victory, and vowed to form his own parallel government.

Second deputy Chief Executive Officer (CEO) and Wehdat-i-Islami Afghanistan party chief Mohammad Meshaq on Friday addressed his supporters in Kabaal and called for prosecution of those involved in the election rigging. He added massive rigging in the presidential election and claimed that the Reality and Partnership had won the election based on illegally verified votes and the team would not accept the results based on fraudulent votes.

The US-Taliban talks, which continued for ten rounds, have ended and both sides are preparing to sign the agreement at the end of the month. The deal would bring to an end the 20-year US drawdown in Afghanistan. The deal is to be in line with the talks between the Taliban and the Afghan government, and the future shape of the political setup.

The Taliban group strongly reacted against the announcement in the government, and the future shape of the political setup. Violence Against Women is Blocking Development

By: Tasleeng Mofokeng

The single highest barrier to development globally is neither hunger nor disease. It is gender-based discrimination and violence.

That is why the Secretary-General of the United Nations, António Guterres, said, “It is time for our world to act with urgency on violence against women and girls.”

The 2019 edition of Girls Not Brides’ report, “The State of the World’s Girls,” found that more than a billion women and girls are experiencing some form of violence in their lifetime. And yet, the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) – which encompass the SDG framework, such as the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development – underpin the right to development.

The law is not perfect. In South Africa, the Constitution guarantees access to reproductive health care, and the 1999 Convention on Termination of Pregnancy (CTOP) act allows abortion on demand up to the 28th week of pregnancy. Yet, abortion rates still remain low. In South Africa, 6.1% of women aged 15–49 report having an abortion in the past 12 months. In South Africa, 53% of women and 37% of men report having experienced violence against women and girls.

In the latter scenario, the women’s risk factors include both social and health factors. Moreover, gender-based violence against women and girls is often underreported. In South Africa, for example, the office of women and girls who have experienced gender-based violence, and only 37% of women and 19% of men report having experienced violence against women and girls.

Despite noteworthy progress since 2001, Afghanistan still faces many challenges and governed as one of the poorest countries in the world. Moreover, the war has claimed more than 40,000 lives from both the Taliban and government forces. Despite the government’s efforts, the Taliban has managed to maintain a significant level of influence in the country and control large parts of the population. However, the Afghan government has failed to make significant progress in the peace process. In addition, the Taliban has been able to gain control over significant areas of the country, particularly in the south and east.

However, if the Taliban declare talks with the government, it is likely that the peace process at stake. That is, this tension will create a path for a larger peace process among all different kinds of political factions within Afghanistan, its large diaspora, and the civil society.

Iranians Vote to Elect New Parliament Amid Uncertainty

TEHRAN, Iran - Polls have opened across Iran in the country's parliamentary election, seen as a test of President Hassan Rouhani's ability to lead the nation. The election is the first since the 2015 nuclear deal, which has helped ease tensions with the West.

"We want to win," said Rouhani on Friday. "The people want to win." The president has been in power since 2013 and is running for a second term.

The election is seen as a test of the Rouhani administration's ability to deliver on the promises of the 2015 nuclear deal, which lifted sanctions in exchange for limits on Iran's nuclear program. The deal was diseñed to prevent Iran from developing a nuclear weapon.
