BEIJING - The president of China's former paratrooper and longtime detached the last four decades of diplomacy that led to the North's first summit with a US president.

China and the US have exchanged messages on the resumption of coordination, cooperation, coordination, cooperation, coordination, and trade disputes, although US Tensions between Beijing and the US have escalated in recent years over issues including trade, technology, human rights, and national security. However, there is hope for a resolution to these issues, as President Biden and President Xi Jinping have both expressed a desire to reduce tensions and improve relations. In his closely watched state visit to China, President Biden will seek to reassuring China that the US is not seeking to contain or undermine China's rise, and China has expressed a commitment to maintaining stability and avoiding conflict.

In a post on his official Facebook page, President Xi Jinping congratulated the Chinese people on the upcoming Lunar New Year, which is the world's largest annual human migration. He wished the Chinese people a healthy and prosperous new year and expressed hope that they will continue to work together for a better future. The Lunar New Year, also known as the Spring Festival, is a major holiday in China and is celebrated with family gatherings, special foods, and traditional activities such as dragon and lion dances. The holiday is a time for renewal and hope, and is a symbol of the Chinese people's resilience and determination to overcome challenges.