Indian and Iranian foreign ministers will meet next week for consultations on the current situation in Afghanistan and making the Chabahar port functional, says a media report.

KABUL - The Federal Bureau of Intelligence (FB) may look into sources of made-up history lessons that President Donald Trump has received from the Soviet invasion and occupation of Afghanistan. Trump defended the Soviet aggression, saying the move was aimed at preventing terrorists from entering the former superpower from Afghanistan.

In televised comments after a cabinet meeting, the American leader asserted the Soviets invaded Afghanistan to battle terrorists -- a position that the United States has never owned.

"Trump gave his own version of why the USSR collapsed. And to be clear, it is in his own version," commented the Washington Post, which said the overlap between the fall of the Soviet Union and its foray into Afghanistan was obvious. "But considering him as a historian, And Trump -- who was using that anecdote to argue that the United States should pull out of Afghanistan was obvious." (Pajhwok)
