said that every Afghan is responsible for protecting national programs and institutions.

Forty-two years on, it has therefore been the country's national interest to start the process of reducing poverty outside Afghanistan's borders. In recent years, public representatives have been fulfilling their obligations to include the Ministry of Finance in the agenda.

The head of the Ministry of Finance, Khalilullah Naderi, said this was an important step to ensure that measures to resolve economic problems in Afghanistan.

In this regard, the Ministry of Finance and Commerce said the moves were aimed at creating a healthy and transparent environment for economic activities in Afghanistan.

Mr. Abdul Habib Zadran, General Director of the Ministry of Commerce and Industry, said the move was a positive step to promote private sector development in Afghanistan. The factory officials said that they had been considering the issue as a national priority.

A number of other legislators also held similar views, demanding a probe into the alleged misuse of state funds and calling for an end to corruption in the public sector.

A number of former presidents have been called to testify about the issue, and the department has been given the task of investigating the matter.

The department summoned Alina's husband to testify about the matter, and the government has been asked to take necessary action.

The government has been asked to take all possible measures to protect women's rights.

The government has been asked to ensure that women have equal access to education, health care, and other basic services.

In Nuristan, Cases referred to judicial organs. However, there have been no reports of such cases.

Faiyaz said Alina, a resident of the provincial capital Panjsher, was found dead in her home with her body covered with blood and her face bruised -- to another young junkie. Alina, however, was divorced before the incident. According to Faiyaz, the 25-year-old was engaged six years back but when she found that her husband did not want to marry her, she complained to the Women's Affairs Department.

Later she asked the department to make her husband hand over the 13 cows she had been pledged in the deposit. However, her husband refused to hand them over.

The issue was then sent to the appellate court, where judge issued a verdict

Faiyaz said Alina was denied the right to divorce her husband and was killed by the words in anger. But Alina refused to marry him, saying she had been disfigured.

The police have been asked to investigate the matter.

The case is being handled by the local police and the investigation is ongoing.

Mr. Abdul Habib Zadran, General Director of the Ministry of Commerce and Industry, said the move was a positive step to promote private sector development in Afghanistan.

The factory officials said that they had been considering the issue as a national priority.

A number of other legislators also held similar views, demanding a probe into the alleged misuse of state funds and calling for an end to corruption in the public sector.

The government has been asked to take all possible measures to protect women's rights.

The government has been asked to ensure that women have equal access to education, health care, and other basic services.

In Nuristan, Cases referred to judicial organs. However, there have been no reports of such cases.

Faiyaz said Alina, a resident of the provincial capital Panjsher, was found dead in her home with her body covered with blood and her face bruised -- to another young junkie. Alina, however, was divorced before the incident. According to Faiyaz, the 25-year-old was engaged six years back but when she found that her husband did not want to marry her, she complained to the Women's Affairs Department.

Later she asked the department to make her husband hand over the 13 cows she had been pledged in the deposit. However, her husband refused to hand them over.

The issue was then sent to the appellate court, where judge issued a verdict

Faiyaz said Alina was denied the right to divorce her husband and was killed by the words in anger. But Alina refused to marry him, saying she had been disfigured.

The police have been asked to investigate the matter.

The case is being handled by the local police and the investigation is ongoing.

Mr. Abdul Habib Zadran, General Director of the Ministry of Commerce and Industry, said the move was a positive step to promote private sector development in Afghanistan.

The factory officials said that they had been considering the issue as a national priority.

A number of other legislators also held similar views, demanding a probe into the alleged misuse of state funds and calling for an end to corruption in the public sector.

The government has been asked to take all possible measures to protect women's rights.

The government has been asked to ensure that women have equal access to education, health care, and other basic services.

In Nuristan, Cases referred to judicial organs. However, there have been no reports of such cases.

Faiyaz said Alina, a resident of the provincial capital Panjsher, was found dead in her home with her body covered with blood and her face bruised -- to another young junkie. Alina, however, was divorced before the incident. According to Faiyaz, the 25-year-old was engaged six years back but when she found that her husband did not want to marry her, she complained to the Women's Affairs Department.

Later she asked the department to make her husband hand over the 13 cows she had been pledged in the deposit. However, her husband refused to hand them over.

The issue was then sent to the appellate court, where judge issued a verdict

Faiyaz said Alina was denied the right to divorce her husband and was killed by the words in anger. But Alina refused to marry him, saying she had been disfigured.

The police have been asked to investigate the matter.

The case is being handled by the local police and the investigation is ongoing.

Mr. Abdul Habib Zadran, General Director of the Ministry of Commerce and Industry, said the move was a positive step to promote private sector development in Afghanistan.

The factory officials said that they had been considering the issue as a national priority.

A number of other legislators also held similar views, demanding a probe into the alleged misuse of state funds and calling for an end to corruption in the public sector.

The government has been asked to take all possible measures to protect women's rights.

The government has been asked to ensure that women have equal access to education, health care, and other basic services.

In Nuristan, Cases referred to judicial organs. However, there have been no reports of such cases.

Faiyaz said Alina, a resident of the provincial capital Panjsher, was found dead in her home with her body covered with blood and her face bruised -- to another young junkie. Alina, however, was divorced before the incident. According to Faiyaz, the 25-year-old was engaged six years back but when she found that her husband did not want to marry her, she complained to the Women's Affairs Department.

Later she asked the department to make her husband hand over the 13 cows she had been pledged in the deposit. However, her husband refused to hand them over.

The issue was then sent to the appellate court, where judge issued a verdict

Faiyaz said Alina was denied the right to divorce her husband and was killed by the words in anger. But Alina refused to marry him, saying she had been disfigured.

The police have been asked to investigate the matter.

The case is being handled by the local police and the investigation is ongoing.

Mr. Abdul Habib Zadran, General Director of the Ministry of Commerce and Industry, said the move was a positive step to promote private sector development in Afghanistan.

The factory officials said that they had been considering the issue as a national priority.

A number of other legislators also held similar views, demanding a probe into the alleged misuse of state funds and calling for an end to corruption in the public sector.

The government has been asked to take all possible measures to protect women's rights.

The government has been asked to ensure that women have equal access to education, health care, and other basic services.

In Nuristan, Cases referred to judicial organs. However, there have been no reports of such cases.

Faiyaz said Alina, a resident of the provincial capital Panjsher, was found dead in her home with her body covered with blood and her face bruised -- to another young junkie. Alina, however, was divorced before the incident. According to Faiyaz, the 25-year-old was engaged six years back but when she found that her husband did not want to marry her, she complained to the Women's Affairs Department.

Later she asked the department to make her husband hand over the 13 cows she had been pledged in the deposit. However, her husband refused to hand them over.

The issue was then sent to the appellate court, where judge issued a verdict

Faiyaz said Alina was denied the right to divorce her husband and was killed by the words in anger. But Alina refused to marry him, saying she had been disfigured.

The police have been asked to investigate the matter.

The case is being handled by the local police and the investigation is ongoing.

Mr. Abdul Habib Zadran, General Director of the Ministry of Commerce and Industry, said the move was a positive step to promote private sector development in Afghanistan.

The factory officials said that they had been considering the issue as a national priority.

A number of other legislators also held similar views, demanding a probe into the alleged misuse of state funds and calling for an end to corruption in the public sector.

The government has been asked to take all possible measures to protect women's rights.

The government has been asked to ensure that women have equal access to education, health care, and other basic services.

In Nuristan, Cases referred to judicial organs. However, there have been no reports of such cases.

Faiyaz said Alina, a resident of the provincial capital Panjsher, was found dead in her home with her body covered with blood and her face bruised -- to another young junkie. Alina, however, was divorced before the incident. According to Faiyaz, the 25-year-old was engaged six years back but when she found that her husband did not want to marry her, she complained to the Women's Affairs Department.

Later she asked the department to make her husband hand over the 13 cows she had been pledged in the deposit. However, her husband refused to hand them over.

The issue was then sent to the appellate court, where judge issued a verdict

Faiyaz said Alina was denied the right to divorce her husband and was killed by the words in anger. But Alina refused to marry him, saying she had been disfigured.

The police have been asked to investigate the matter.

The case is being handled by the local police and the investigation is ongoing.