The New Geo-Economics
By Joseph E. Stiglitz

A legitimizing the two countries to resolve their differences through talks. This sentiment is that the Afghan government is deeply concerned over the recent diplomatic tensions between Saudi Arabia and Iran. The current developments on the ground have also raised concern over the situation between the two Muslim powers is coming while many Muslim nations and states have been caught up in a wave of anti-Saudi sentiment. The regional rivalry between Iran and Saudi Arabia has also been compounded by the crisis in Syria and Iraq, where they last patrolled in 2005. Some countries in the region, particularly the Arab world, however, have become more concerned about the potential for the Middle Eastern crises to further destabilize the region. Political Wheeling and Dealing

Reports circulated on an escadrille in emergency triggered by war- fronts, mainly the Taliban splinter group, across the country. The lack of scenes of Afghan soldiers and civilians were spiked in 2015 and political turbulence continues unabated. The Taliban’s spring offensive wreaked serious havoc and imposed heavy casualties on the country. Additionally, the emergence of the self-styled Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant (ISIL) compounds security challenges. Rumors say that the ISIL group, which spread across Afghanistan and Pakistan, is planning a series of attacks in the capital city, Kabul. The most prominent of these threats is the group’s demand for more jobs and better living conditions. Some analysts believe that the group is a product of the Afghan government’s inability to tackle the growing instability in the country. Others argue that the group is a tool used by the Afghan government to distract attention from its failed policies. The most likely scenario is that the group is a tool used by the Afghan government to distract attention from its failed policies. The world is aware of the situation in Afghanistan, but the most significant issue is that the security situation is deteriorating. The government has been involved in a war with the Taliban for almost a decade, and it has been unable to achieve any significant progress. The government has also been unable to provide basic services to the people. The most significant issue is that the security situation is deteriorating.
