KABUL - The Independent Commission Overseeing the Implementation of the Constitution (ICOIC) on Sunday said there are problems with the constitution and some articles need to be clarified. ICOIC earlier said there were challenges in terms of implementing 20 articles of the constitution and as a result these had not been fully implemented.

"Article seven of the constitution says that Afghanistan will implement these constitution articles. The point is whether we have implemented those articles or not," ICOIC member Sadiq Safi said.

The problems that ICOIC encountered in implementing the articles were that "the articles are not clear for any government," he said.

One point is that the meaning of "did not implement" is not clear. "There are two things, one is that we (sign) a convention and the other thing (sign) a convention: just means that government has an obligation to implement the constitution's values," said Mo- hammed Ibrahim, head of ICOIC.

Another thing is that the constitution has many problems and that there are articles which are not clear and those need to be clarified. "When the constitution, sparked controversy about the function of parliament and elections, whether parliament can still continue its job without holding elections," said Abul Wafa Ferhati, a lawyer.

Lawyers also said the constitution needs to be amended and some articles should be revised." Articles related to courts, to interpretation of the constitution, to removing elections and holding elections, need to be amended," said Ahmadzai Lashkarz, executive director of Afghanistans Lawyers Alliance (ALLS).

Despite all those problems, Afghanistan constitution is one of the best in the region and gives Afghans more freedom than citizens get in some other countries (Tolovesh).
