The demonstration of journalists must end

By: Leon Willems

For years this month ago, Sadaf and Chitral Kohsia stormed the Paris offices of the French satirical magazine Charlie Hebdo on January 7, 2015, shooting last minute 12 people. The attacks were one of the most shocking events in France in recent years. Among those killed was American journalist James Foley, who became one of the most popular Twitter hashtags ever, resulting in a wave of solidarity. French President Francois Hollande condemned the attacks, saying the killers were not to be the agents of the French people, but the agents of the Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant (ISIL) in Iraq and Syria, etc. were highly offensive and outraged the human conscience. Therefore, both governments and anti-government parties have to practice upon international instruments, human arts, and ethical codes. Governments are not allowed to humiliate the military or violate their human rights. On the other hand, human rights and dignity of all individuals, including combatants and non-combatants, are inviolable. Combatants are not to target civilians at all. Similarly, war prisoners, “the wounded and sick in armed forces in the field” should be treated with humanity.

No one shall be subjected to torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.” This is firmly stated in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UDHR). Although human or inhuman treatment is widely stated in international statements, it is still ambiguous to some extent. It is said that inhuman treatment includes an act which leads to indescribable mental or physical pain or suffering. These practices which are contrary to the fundamental principles of human treatment especially vio- lates someone’s “inalienable right to live” and makes such a person be humiliated. In human treatment, if someone is not a unanimous victim, a person is not advised to refer to public conscience, human rights, and the “golden rule”, which is beyond cultural or political restrictions. Golden rule, which says do to others what you want to be done to you, is accepted in all cultures and religions and agreed upon globally.

There are a number of fundamental principles accepted globally and prevailing in all cultures. Generally speaking, there are four main principles of human rights: equality and non-discrimination; life, liberty and personal autonomy; the right to work, decent working conditions and fair remuneration; and the right to education, culture, science, and cultural activities. These four principles are accepted widely in different cultures and religions. It is said that the principle of non-discrimination is the mainstay of human rights and it is considered to be a necessary condition for the realization of other human rights. When these rights are violated, it is inhuman treatment. To realize inhuman treatment, the source is not a unanimous victim. A person is not advised to refer to public conscience, human rights, and the “golden rule”, which is beyond cultural or political restrictions. Golden rule, which says do to others what you want to be done to you, is accepted in all cultures and religions and agreed upon globally.
President Ghani has won the election by securing 50.6% of the vote, the electoral commission said on Saturday, September 26. The presidential election was held on September 28 last year. Presidential candidates included Ashraf Ghani, who served as the president from 2009 to 2014, and Abdullah Abdullah, who served as the vice president and presidential candidate in 2014.

Ghani has been in power since 2014, when he won a presidential election that was marred by fraud and violence. He has faced criticism for his handling of the ongoing Taliban insurgency and the economic crisis in the country.

Ghani's victory in the election comes as he faces challenges from the Taliban, who have been fighting for control of the country for decades. The Taliban have expanded their influence in recent years, and they have been able to take control of many areas of Afghanistan.

A coalition and US officials described an "absolute tragedy" as a US official told Fox News that Soleimani was "going off his rocker" and its people stood to suffer the most from the tension and Tehran's war.

The revelations come as US officials reportedly are expected to tell Congress that Soleimani was in a military facility in Erbil on Wednesday. The revelations are expected to infuriate trade unions on Friday by including nine children on plane crash.

KABUL - The Independent Electoral Complaints Commission (IECC) says votes from 1900 new polling stations in 25 provinces will be released and audited following registration of a large number of complaints.

IECC deputy head Zarmina Haqiq told Pajhwok Afghan News a large number of complaints had been registered with them against the 1900 polling stations. “Those are new polling stations in most of provinces,” she said.

She said the IECC had completed its investigation in most of provinces. She said most of the complaints had been received in Kabul, Nangarhar and Helmand provinces, where the results of the investigation was underway and expected to be completed until next month.

However, she said it was not known when the audit of the new 1900 polling stations would be completed.

JALALABAD - Residents and officials of eastern Nangarhar province on Thursday said the people should be informed about the fate of those arrested in connection with the assassination of Tariq Nakamura.

Some suspects have been detained in connection with Afghanista- n’s murder but people say the detention of two individuals is not true, then they should be publicly sentenced or hanged.

Nakamura was killed along with his five Afghan subordinates in an attack in Jalalabad city, capital of Nangarhar province, on Dec- ember 5, 2019. Local officials say the plot was designed outside the country.

A week after the incident, Nang- garhar officials said a technical team from the central govern- ment arrived in the province for investigation of the incident. The officials had said two suspects were also arrested in connection with the attack.

However, officials concerned provided no explanation about the case as a around month has passed since the incident.

Ajmal Omar, Nangarhar provin- cial council deputy head, told Pajhwok Afghan News that local of- ficials had announced detention of two people after the incident only for not leaving their job.

“If the two detained individu- als are really criminals, then why wait for their sentence, it is the demand of the public that the per- petrators of the incident should be publicly sentenced,” he said.

Mala/Samrat, a tribal elder from Kama district, also said that of- ficials concerned should provide explanation about the detention of the two people.

A civil society activist, Amalgha- din, also said Nakamura’s case needed proper investigation and the public should be provided with explanation about the inci- dent.

“Nakamura spent his whole life in services of the country and he faced his fate here, now it is the government’s duty to inves- tigate his case,” he said.

However, Nangarhar officials said they had shared information about the case with the central government and they had also provided further authority to talk on the regard.

Attallah Khegans, government spokesperson, said, “Information has been shared with the central government they are examining it and if they will also share infor- mation about the central council. However, Farzaliullah, Nangarhar police chief, said they were not allowed to comment about the case.

“Interior minister contacted us that they can share information to the public on the case and we should not talk about the issue,” he said.

The assassination of Nakamura is one of the biggest international level.
