The president made the pledge earlier, President Ashraf Ghani schedule before noon at a press conference at his compound.
The statement from the IEC said the schedule for Wolesi Jirga had to be changed.
The Independent Election Commission (IEC) said the election timetable had been prepared keeping in mind the capacity of the election bodies after necessary consultation with national and international advisors.
In its statement, the IEC sought government’s help to meet its financial and security requirements for successfully conducting the delayed ballots.
Addressing a session of Wolesi Jirga, IEC chief Ahmad Yusuf Nasirzai said the commission had taken measures to avoid past mistakes. The measures included an appointment of workers on short-term contracts and improving the election procedure.
According to the IEC, the election timetable had been prepared keeping in mind the capacity of the election bodies after necessary consultation with national and international advisors.

UN Chief Urges World to Bridge Humanitarian Aid Funding Gap

The report states that in 2016 more than 125 million women, men and children across the world will need humanitarian assistance just to survive.
The UN chief urged the international community to remove the hinderances for more humanitarian assistance.

At Least 13 Dead, 14 Wounded in Attack: Official

At least 13 displaced families have received much needed aid packages in northern Balkh province, officials said Saturday.
Director Abdul Saloor Qadir said the packages include flour, ghee, beans, sugar and blankets and are from United Nations.
“The displaced and repatriated families were identified by a joint team of Balkh officials during the past 15 days and were provided special cards,” he said.

Syria Says IS Group Killed 300 in Attacks

Suicide Bombing in Jalalabad Widely Condemned

The Britain-based Syrian Observatory for Human Rights, which documents all sides of the Syria conflict, said that most of those killed in Saturday’s attacks were elderly people, women and children, while opposition activists said many of the victims were Syrian soldiers and pro-government militiamen and their families.

At least 13 displaced families have received much needed aid packages in northern Balkh province, officials said Saturday.
Director Abdul Saloor Qadir said the packages include flour, ghee, beans, sugar and blankets and are from United Nations.
“The displaced and repatriated families were identified by a joint team of Balkh officials during the past 15 days and were provided special cards,” he said.

Syria Says IS Group Killed 300 in Attacks

The Britain-based Syrian Observatory for Human Rights, which documents all sides of the Syria conflict, said that most of those killed in Saturday’s attacks were elderly people, women and children, while opposition activists said many of the victims were Syrian soldiers and pro-government militiamen and their families.

At least 13 displaced families have received much needed aid packages in northern Balkh province, officials said Saturday.
Director Abdul Saloor Qadir said the packages include flour, ghee, beans, sugar and blankets and are from United Nations.
“The displaced and repatriated families were identified by a joint team of Balkh officials during the past 15 days and were provided special cards,” he said.

Syria Says IS Group Killed 300 in Attacks

The Britain-based Syrian Observatory for Human Rights, which documents all sides of the Syria conflict, said that most of those killed in Saturday’s attacks were elderly people, women and children, while opposition activists said many of the victims were Syrian soldiers and pro-government militiamen and their families.

At least 13 displaced families have received much needed aid packages in northern Balkh province, officials said Saturday.
Director Abdul Saloor Qadir said the packages include flour, ghee, beans, sugar and blankets and are from United Nations.
“The displaced and repatriated families were identified by a joint team of Balkh officials during the past 15 days and were provided special cards,” he said.

Syria Says IS Group Killed 300 in Attacks

The Britain-based Syrian Observatory for Human Rights, which documents all sides of the Syria conflict, said that most of those killed in Saturday’s attacks were elderly people, women and children, while opposition activists said many of the victims were Syrian soldiers and pro-government militiamen and their families.

At least 13 displaced families have received much needed aid packages in northern Balkh province, officials said Saturday.
Director Abdul Saloor Qadir said the packages include flour, ghee, beans, sugar and blankets and are from United Nations.
“The displaced and repatriated families were identified by a joint team of Balkh officials during the past 15 days and were provided special cards,” he said.