Ulema Should Play Role in Promoting Peace

With the extremist militant groups raging war and violence across the country, a government initiative organized by the Ministry of Hajj and Religious Affairs is seeking the religious scholars’ help for tackling extremism in Afghanistan. The miniistry has organized a three-day conference in Kabul on the phenomenon of extremism in the country, with about 400 religious scholars and the Ulema council is a step forward in the efforts to prevent the youths from joining the Taliban and other terrorist groups. However, there are conflicting views over the activities of the extremist religious scholars. Some politicians have been criticizing the religious scholars including some of which are centers of promoting violence and extremism. In the meeting to be held in Kabul, the government would devise a roadmap to hold these talks take between Taliban and Afghan government.

The importance of these talks is of prime importance because of the two important powers of the world, the United States and China. Both the countries have a long history of relations in the affairs of Afghanistan and have been involved in the last 15 years of democracy. Both the countries have significant influence over their region, which is of vital importance in the area.

The religious scholars, the Taliban and the Islamic State militants all have principles and policies to maintain their own rights and interests. While the Taliban and the Islamic State want to maintain their control over the country, the religious scholars want to maintain their influence over the people.

In their meetings, the religious scholars will try to achieve a common ground on issues of concern to the people. They will try to understand each other’s positions and try to find a solution that will benefit both sides.

However, the religious scholars have failed to achieve a common ground on many issues, including the future of Afghanistan. The government has failed to give them the support they need to achieve their goals.

The Ulema conference will be an attempt to bring the religious scholars, the Taliban and the Islamic State together to find a solution to the problem of extremism in Afghanistan.

This need is felt after the increasing insecurity in different parts of the country and the struggle of Afghan government and forces to contain the increasing activities of Taliban and Daesh in the country. After the withdrawal of the US and NATO forces from Afghanistan, the Taliban and Daesh have increased their activities. In the last years, the Taliban have evicted the Afghan government from many parts of the country. The government has been unable to tackle the increasing activities of the Taliban and Daesh.
