Red Doors Making Asylum Seekers in UK Targets: Report

LONDON - Britain's source ministry said Wednesday that asylum seekers and landlords in northwest London were facing a serious problem in their efforts to keep homeless asylum seekers from being evicted. The announcement follows an investigation by the Times newspaper which said that the Home Office was not doing enough to prevent the eviction of asylum seekers. The report said that the government was considering a plan to evict asylum seekers from their homes in the northwest of London.
