The formulation of the Kabul's Dulls' Lungs

By: Sayed Sanae Sadat

From smogging heavy cars to smoke inside the home, air pollution is a common threat in Afghanistan. Air pollution experts warn that the Kabul's air pollution is more severe than in other major cities. Air pollution which is also known as ambient air pollution can be defined as the presence of various chemical and physical pollutants. These pollutants can lead to health impacts which are usually unnoticeable at first. But these impacts can be serious in the long run. The Kabul Health Department has admitted in his book The Return of Depression Economics that the clean air principle is a basic right of every human. The most populated city of Afghanistan, Kabul, has almost 6 million people and the quality of air pollution is rising. The air pollution in Kabul has reached to a dangerous level, and the residents of Kabul suffer from various health problems. The Kabul's Supreme Council for Health and Environment (KSCHE) has taken some measures to control the air pollution in Kabul. The Council has established the Kabul's Dulls' Lungs' Taskforce to improve the air quality in Kabul. The taskforce has taken some measures to reduce the air pollution in Kabul. The measures taken by the taskforce have included the following:

1. The taskforce has taken measures to reduce the number of heavy cars on the roads of Kabul. The taskforce has encouraged the residents of Kabul to use public transportation instead of private cars.
2. The taskforce has taken measures to reduce the number of factories and industries in Kabul. The taskforce has encouraged the industries to use clean energy instead of fossil fuels.
3. The taskforce has taken measures to reduce the number of vehicles on the roads of Kabul. The taskforce has encouraged the residents of Kabul to use bicycles and walking instead of private cars.

These measures have helped to improve the air quality in Kabul. The residents of Kabul are now enjoying a better quality of air. The taskforce has taken some other measures to control the air pollution in Kabul. The residents of Kabul are now enjoying a better quality of air.
Ukrainian Defense Minister Says Achieving Military Criteria for NATO Membership Is His Main Objective

KYIV - Ukrainian Defense Minister Andriy Zahorii has said that there is a need to become a member of the NATO Enhanced Opportunity Program to be his main objectives.

"In Brussels, we had systemic meetings where we agreed on many transition standards. The reform should be implemented in close cooperation with NATO, so that Ukraine achieves all NATO standards. If we have problems with these roadmaps and have agreements upon them, then these roadmaps have been agreed upon and supported by the Ukrainian parliament in the January, because there are several transitional standards there," he said. Kazakh Maritime Patrol Detains Azerbaijani Fishermen

NUR SULTAN - Border Service of Kazakhstan's National Security Committee has arrested four Azerbaijanis on the territorial waters of Kazakhstan, Trend reports with reference to the committee.

The incident took place on the night of Jan. 21-22, 2020. "The Saber border patrol ship was carrying out the monitoring of Azerbaijani fishing vessels in the Kazakh-Kyrgyzstan's maritime borders on the Caspian Sea. During the monitoring, the patrol ship set a target and tried to stop them. Our coast guards reached via international channel, but the target did not respond and Saber started approaching it," the report said.

The target turned out to be a Baita boat (Cage-net boat) on which there would be nothing that would not respond on the demands to stop and try to escape south-west. The coast guard detained the boat.

As a result of the pursuit, Kazakhstan's Border Service arrested four Azerbaijani citizens born 1975, 1975, 1983 and 1983. The detained are charged with illegal crossing of the state border of Kazakhstan and fishing without a license, the report said.

The initial report did not specify which country the poaching sea boat arrived from, (Trend)

Injustice Prolongs War in Afghanistan

Sima Samar, the State Minister for Human Rights, said that the Afghan people are hoping for peace in the country, get those who are seeking their interest in war do not want peace.

KABUL - The State Minister for Human Rights said on Wednesday [January 22, 2020] in the occasion of “The Afghanistan Voice for Peace” hosted by Friedrich Ebert Stiftung Foundation and Afghanistan Policy Group that peace without justice is not sustainable and would lead to the continuation of war in the country.

In the meantime, Mohammed Fakhri, a prominent civil society and women’s rights activist, said, as well, that the Afghan government is ready for any positive results of the negotiations, adding that the peace agreement must be inclusive. Hopes for peace in the country come as the Afghan government has always emphasized on a permanent ceasefire, calling it a prerequisite for the intra-Afghan talks.

However, the Taliban are negotiating with the United States about reduction of violence, but so far no have said nothing about the ceasefire.
