KABUL - Sanam Marvi spill bourned an audience of more than 350 Afghans and diplomats at an elaborate, well-organized and colorful Cultural Festival at the Ambassador’s residence at Kabul on April 1st. The New Zealand spy service has affirmed its commitment to launch an investigation into certain events unfolding in Afghanistan. On Friday, according to the Big Today, the Inspector-General unveiled a work programme for 2018-19, including the Afghanistan-related inquiry.

Director-General of Security Rebecca Kitteridge said the NZSIS would back the inquiry into Operation Burnham, announced by the attorney-general on April 1st. The panelists concluded that Afghan media could best contribute to agricultural development by establishing a connection between farmers and government officials to ensure an information flow. Further, media could help transferring up-to-date knowledge to farmers and promote the sector by reporting on success stories and in a media meeting in Mazar-e-Sharif, four expert panellists and more than 50 journalists discussed how the media could play a role in promoting agricultural development in Afghanistan.

Media’s Role in Promoting Agricultural Development in Afghanistan

In a media meeting in Mazaw-Sharif, four expert panellists and more than 50 journalists discussed how the media could play a role in promoting agricultural development in Afghanistan.

73 Wolesi Jirga Candidates Missing from Initial List

KABUL - The Independent Election Commission (IEC) has removed the names of 73 prospective candidates from the initial list of candidates over ‘incomplete documents.’ Other reasons for rejecting their nomination papers were repeated support cards, support cards out of zone and problems in their documents. The IEC initially said one individual had been arrested in connection with the incident. But the detainee was later freed. (Pajhwok)

NZ Spy Service to Support Inquiry into Afghan Events

KABUL - Badakhshan Officials Hold Talks with Taliban

KABUL - Badakhshan officials said a number of Taliban members in the province are interested in joining the peace process. As government’s unilateral ceasefire comes to an end, official in Badakhshan province, in the far north east of Afghanistan, said a large number of Taliban members are interested in joining the peace process.

Badrul Murtaza said: “Agriculture is the key to economic development in Afghanistan. Cooperatives have also been established by Afghan-German Cooperation in 2018-19, including 16 women from initial list names of 73 prospective candidates. The panelists concluded that Afghan media could best contribute to agricultural development by establishing a connection between farmers and government officials to ensure an information flow. Further, media could help transferring up-to-date knowledge to farmers and promote the sector by reporting on success stories.

In addition, most of Afghanistan’s export-based stan depending on the sector for their livelihood. Said: “Agriculture is the key to economic development in Afghanistan. Cooperatives have also been established by Afghan-German Cooperation in 2018-19, including 16 women from initial list names of 73 prospective candidates. The panelists concluded that Afghan media could best contribute to agricultural development by establishing a connection between farmers and government officials to ensure an information flow. Further, media could help transferring up-to-date knowledge to farmers and promote the sector by reporting on success stories.

The panelists concluded that Afghan media could best contribute to agricultural development by establishing a connection between farmers and government officials to ensure an information flow. Further, media could help transferring up-to-date knowledge to farmers and promote the sector by reporting on success stories.