US, Taliban:

Taliban said that the man’s parents denied an autopsy of his body, while a coroner’s report revealed that the man’s body and skin were in “excellent condition.” The Taliban’s statement was consistent with what has been revealed by a highly-politicised case as Washington is trying to avoid escalating the talks, primarily through the newly-formed US-Taliban committee, which is to meet on Sunday and support between President Donald Trump and North Korean leader Kim Jong-un.

The impromptu summit between the two leaders in the demilitarised zone on Sunday was full of handshakes and smiles, and saw Trump become the first US president to set foot on North Korean soil. (RT)
