PARIS – French President Emmanuel Macron says it is trying to find a way to hold a dialogue between Iran and Western partners.

In a statement, he said: “I think we should try to find a way not only to de-escalate the situation but also to ensure that we have a dialogue between all parties.”

However, the statement did not elaborate on how this dialogue might be accomplished, as Europe is struggling to save the 2015 accord after Theresa May’s government decided to leave the European Union without a deal.

Macron said he “would ask for a dialogue between all par- for three months. If the talks fail, he said, the United States would trigger the nuclear arms verification and withdrawal of the 1973 nuclear arms treaty.

The US has not yet decided whether to trigger the nuclear arms verification and withdrawal of the 1973 nuclear arms treaty.
