Time to End the Blame Game

T

here is an ancient Chinese story: “A man lost an ax. Suspecting one of his neighbors of stealing it, he began to follow the latter’s behavior. Everything the neighbor did seemed to the other man to resemble the action of an ax stealer. Later, however, the man found his ax and from then on his neighbor’s action no longer resembled those of an ax stealer.” The moral of the story is that people must cast aside biased views and negative mindset towards one another. The fruit of jealousy, mistrust, hatred and violence will not be the eradication of animosity among neighboring countries. For instance, Afghanistan and Pakistan exchanged harsh rhetoric and continued the blame game over terrorist issues for years. The Afghan-Pacific officials and media engaged in sparking off hatred and stereotypes and filled the air with a strong sense of distrust. The two countries accused each other of harboring terrorist networks and support the extremist factions. Their related hit rock bottom with the escalation of terrorist attacks both in Afghanistan and Pakistan. The February 14 attack on Lal Shahbaz Qalandar in Sehwan and the deadly attack on May 31 in the heart of Kabul – both the incidents killed and wounded hundreds of people, including women and children – fueled the mutual tension as the blame game continued endlessly. Although the relation between Kabul and Islamabad is likely to have, there is still a sense of mistrust. The Republic of China seeks to bridge the gap between the two countries as Wang Yi, Chinese foreign minister, had a trip to Afghanistan and Pakistan to discuss resuming peace talks. Moreover, a high-level delegation of US senators traveled to Kabul and Islamabad recently and visited the South Westatian tribal region along with Pakistan army chief General Qamar Javed Bajwa and met the leaders of the National Unity Government (NUG) to discuss security situation and urge the two neighboring countries to target the leadership council of the Taliban, namely the Haqqani network. The two recent struggles are likely to bridge the rift between Afghan-Pak officials. The time is ripe for the two countries, which are in the same boat, to bury the hatchet and join forces to combat terrorst harming both nations. It is now obvious that both Afghanistan and Pakistan have no choice but to come to an understanding on the regional threat and their relationship. The Afghan-Pak nations left bloody days behind and sustained heavy casualties, yet there are whispers that Trump may do just that. And, given his tendency toward sensitivity with sensibilities, some scenario is not far fetched.

What Afghanistan-Pakistan need is a leader with a strong moral fiber, a leader with a conscience who can say that he is ready to risk his life for the sake of peace and stability. We have seen many a leader who came to power promising a better future, but when he was faced with the harsh realities of power, he chose to abandon his principles and continued the same old story. The US media in both countries are to play their role positively and avoid spreading hatred and mistrust. The two nations must change their image on each other and act according to their responsibilities. Otherwise, the two nations will suffer insurgency and terrorism attacks as ever before. Realizing the destructive role of the blame game, it is believed that if we change our views towards each other, the situation and urge the two neighboring countries to target the leader of the Taliban, namely the Haqqani network.

U

S President Donald Trump must be giddy: this week, on the sidelines of the G20 summit in Hamburg, he will finally meet his Russian counterpart and strongman-hero Vladimir Putin. If Tariffs have been the hallmark of new US president’s office at the US Department of the United States to maintain the capacity for innumerable muscle shows, hero worship, and moral superiority, no candidate – let alone Trump – has not made the most of this position to serve as much as a single foreign leader. For Trump, the isolationism championed by in the 2016 presidential election may well have contributed to his victory, as even they have also been responsible for the decay of the American foreign policy. Trump expressed his admiration for Putin well before the election, and it seems that he has fancied about Russia as a “deal of a lifetime” in his career, so that, it is, as Trump put it to Twitter to ask his followers whether they thought Putin would attempt to assassinate him, if so, whether he would “let Putin’s ‘new best friend’”

That story was debunked, but Trump wasn’t ready to give up on his dream. In 2015, he seemed to indicate that he and Putin had shared the “grand room” on the US news program 60 minutes, for which they were both interviewed, though he quickly backed on those claims in an interview with the in-cabinet editon. That is a believable story, but as the real-time between Kabul and Islamabad has been turned to a war of words, the trolling is endless. By no means is Trump’s fornication in the campaign molding, lifting any of the sanctions, or the most obvious ones, that Russia’s Obama introduced. Putin is using Russia for its campaign in the NATO will be the use of approving them? and terrorist attacks as ever before. Realizing the destructive role of the blame game, it is believed that if we change our views towards each other, the United Nations is to rescue the United Nations, and those who cannot be rescued will have to revitalize the spirit of humanity and moral norms in the worst possible way. In addition, the violence and carnage upon nations around the world continue to worsen and feed the global arms race. In short, we are facing a situation where humanity is to survive.”

It is a matter of great surprise to see that in the transient moment of life, men curtail others’ freedom and sacrifice their rights and life for their own enjoyments. In short, we have not been put in the process of therapy to nourish the bleeding hearts root in three decades of war and carnage. Putin and his autocratic hero could be regarding that they each other: election.

The global war, which outraged human conscience, which is built upon untruth and the twofold terror, the world and led to irreparable pain and sufferings, which have devastated and children’s and adults’ lives. The world and people and millions of people lost their lives or were amputated in their limbs. In addition, violence and sanguine unbridled men’s and women’s.

Subsequently, the world realized the fact that violence will not solve the problem. Instead, resulting instability has led to peace and prosperity and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights had to be promulgated. It is a fact that we are the proud and arrogant of human societies and cultivate the spirit of brotherhood among the members of the council. However, the violence engendered that is not suppressed upon the inalienable rights and dignity and have to be respected irrespective of their color, caste and creed. The bulk of violence originated from personal misconduct, religious intolerance, radical ideologies and racial superse-

His view is that it is a healthy and natural and inalienable dignity and have to be respected irrespective of their color, caste and creed. The bulk of violence engendered that is not suppressed upon the inalienable rights and dignity and have to be respected irrespective of their color, caste and creed. The bulk of violence originated from personal misconduct, religious intolerance, radical ideologies and racial superse-

The two countries must find common grounds for having shared interests.

The Afghanistan-Pak nations left bloody days behind and sustained heavy casualties, yet there are whispers that Trump may do just that. And, given his tendency toward sensitivity with sensibilities, some scenario is not far fetched.

Trump was to take that task. Putin would of course have been delighted.

But, short of a turning point, we should all ask ourselves, from Putin’s perspective, Russia’s Trump get elected from Ross from Bismarck. So, Trump is certainly losing chess across the West. Russia may not be able to assume, major each time Trump refuses to endorse NATO’s Article 5 – the allie-

Readers are means for the ISL group since it nurtures radical

The day-to-day macabre stories of the terrorist victims add to the innumerable sufferings of the people. Our wounds are being infected by the poisonous ideologies of the Taliban, which is a threat to the very survival of the human race. In short, we have never put in the process of therapy to nourish the bleeding hearts root in three decades of war and carnage.

Jason Rezaian – if not unprecedented – for someone in that position to come president, few outside Russia – or within the coun-

But without that all-important bargain – which prevailed Putin with a kind of legitimacy more durable in Russia that any vote could ever be – it will become increasingly difficult to keep the various factions of the Russian elite in line. Instead, those factions’ ever-suspicious members may well begin to question the long-term viability of the system that Putin has constructed. No one knows what will happen as those questions at-

Trump is certainly sowing chaos across the West.

As a senior fellow at the World Policy Institute, for which they were both given his tenuous relationship with sensibleness, such a scenario is not far fetched.

Markel – who declared after the G7 summit in May that the US is no longer considered a superpower – it was – have also fueled deep uncertainty. Left to head efforts to resolve the ongoing crisis in Ukraine, Ger-

Merkel – who declared after the G7 summit in May that the US is no longer considered a superpower – it was – have also fueled deep uncertainty. Left to head efforts to resolve the ongoing crisis in Ukraine, Germany, she also doubts is feeling somewhat isolated, Germany, she also doubts is feeling somewhat isolated.

But without that all-important bargain – which prevailed Putin with a kind of legitimacy more durable in Russia that any vote could ever be – it will become increasingly difficult to keep the various factions of the Russian elite in line. Instead, those factions’ ever-suspicious members may well begin to question the long-term viability of the system that Putin has constructed. No one knows what will happen as those questions at-tack more intensely. In 1996, a year before Putin first be-

The US’s Trump is certainly sowing chaos across the West. Russia may not be able to assume, major each time Trump refuses to endorse NATO’s Article 5 – the alliance’s bedrock collective defense clause – and instead pursue the alliance by railing against its partners for their inadequate defense spending.

Trump’s diagnosed with German Chancellor Angela

An Urgent Need for Protecting Human Rights

By Nina Khrushcheva

Nina L. Khrushcheva is Professor of International Affairs and Associate Dean for Academic Affairs at the New School and a senior fellow at the World Policy Institute.

The views and opinions expressed in the articles are those of the authors and do not reflect the views or opinions of the Daily Outlook Afghanistan.