The Warsaw summit, NATO's first meeting since its enlargement, was an opportunity for member states to reaffirm their commitment to the defense and security of the alliance. The summit also marked the beginning of NATO's new strategic approach, which includes a stronger focus on capability development and a more integrated approach to defending against hybrid threats. The alliance has also announced the establishment of a new defense task force to support countries in the region and other member states. The summit concluded with a declaration of support for the association with Jordan, as well as a commitment to increase defense spending to 2% of GDP. The president of the United States, Barack Obama, who attended the summit, said that "Our 28 nations working together, we have the ability to do great things."
