HONG KONG - US adviser Bolton travels to Japan, South Korea amid trade dispute

WASHINGTON - US national security adviser John Bolton departed on Saturday for South Korea, to key allies of Washington that are embroiled in a trade dispute.

A White House National Security Council spokesman said on Twitter that Bolton planned to brief the two countries on their latest expression of protest against the US trade war.

President Donald Trump on Friday offered hints at a possible easing of tensions in the economic and political dispute between Washington and Seoul, by saying that the US could give China "some very big. Hwang says that with its successful landing and future missions, South Korea can make a strong contribution to the peaceful use of outer space.

Hwang said his country is "optimistic" about the future use of space for peaceful purposes.
