Most Preferred Diplomats to Military Action on Korean Peninsula Nuclear Issue: Poll

WASHINGTON -- As the Russian President arrives on Monday to discuss the standoff with the Korean Peninsula nuclear issue, a new poll found that a majority of Americans believe the United States should use diplomacy instead of military action.

According to the NBC / South Korea News poll released early Sunday, 57 percent of American-registered voters say the United States should mostly use diplomacy in dealing with the other nuclear issue.

Most Americans prefer diplomacy to military action on Korean Peninsula Nuclear Issue: Poll

Most Preferred Diplomats to Military Action on Korean Peninsula Nuclear Issue: Poll

WASHINGTON -- As the Russian President arrives on Monday to discuss the standoff with the Korean Peninsula nuclear issue, a new poll found that a majority of Americans believe the United States should use diplomacy instead of military action.

According to the NBC / South Korea News poll released early Sunday, 57 percent of American-registered voters say the United States should mostly use diplomacy in dealing with the other nuclear issue.

Most Americans prefer diplomacy to military action on Korean Peninsula Nuclear Issue: Poll

Most Preferred Diplomats to Military Action on Korean Peninsula Nuclear Issue: Poll

WASHINGTON -- As the Russian President arrives on Monday to discuss the standoff with the Korean Peninsula nuclear issue, a new poll found that a majority of Americans believe the United States should use diplomacy instead of military action.

According to the NBC / South Korea News poll released early Sunday, 57 percent of American-registered voters say the United States should mostly use diplomacy in dealing with the other nuclear issue.

Most Americans prefer diplomacy to military action on Korean Peninsula Nuclear Issue: Poll

Most Preferred Diplomats to Military Action on Korean Peninsula Nuclear Issue: Poll

WASHINGTON -- As the Russian President arrives on Monday to discuss the standoff with the Korean Peninsula nuclear issue, a new poll found that a majority of Americans believe the United States should use diplomacy instead of military action.

According to the NBC / South Korea News poll released early Sunday, 57 percent of American-registered voters say the United States should mostly use diplomacy in dealing with the other nuclear issue.

Most Americans prefer diplomacy to military action on Korean Peninsula Nuclear Issue: Poll

Most Preferred Diplomats to Military Action on Korean Peninsula Nuclear Issue: Poll

WASHINGTON -- As the Russian President arrives on Monday to discuss the standoff with the Korean Peninsula nuclear issue, a new poll found that a majority of Americans believe the United States should use diplomacy instead of military action.

According to the NBC / South Korea News poll released early Sunday, 57 percent of American-registered voters say the United States should mostly use diplomacy in dealing with the other nuclear issue.

Most Americans prefer diplomacy to military action on Korean Peninsula Nuclear Issue: Poll

Most Preferred Diplomats to Military Action on Korean Peninsula Nuclear Issue: Poll

WASHINGTON -- As the Russian President arrives on Monday to discuss the standoff with the Korean Peninsula nuclear issue, a new poll found that a majority of Americans believe the United States should use diplomacy instead of military action.

According to the NBC / South Korea News poll released early Sunday, 57 percent of American-registered voters say the United States should mostly use diplomacy in dealing with the other nuclear issue.

Most Americans prefer diplomacy to military action on Korean Peninsula Nuclear Issue: Poll

Most Preferred Diplomats to Military Action on Korean Peninsula Nuclear Issue: Poll

WASHINGTON -- As the Russian President arrives on Monday to discuss the standoff with the Korean Peninsula nuclear issue, a new poll found that a majority of Americans believe the United States should use diplomacy instead of military action.

According to the NBC / South Korea News poll released early Sunday, 57 percent of American-registered voters say the United States should mostly use diplomacy in dealing with the other nuclear issue.

Most Preferred Diplomats to Military Action on Korean Peninsula Nuclear Issue: Poll

WASHINGTON -- As the Russian President arrives on Monday to discuss the standoff with the Korean Peninsula nuclear issue, a new poll found that a majority of Americans believe the United States should use diplomacy instead of military action.

According to the NBC / South Korea News poll released early Sunday, 57 percent of American-registered voters say the United States should mostly use diplomacy in dealing with the other nuclear issue.

Most Preferred Diplomats to Military Action on Korean Peninsula Nuclear Issue: Poll

WASHINGTON -- As the Russian President arrives on Monday to discuss the standoff with the Korean Peninsula nuclear issue, a new poll found that a majority of Americans believe the United States should use diplomacy instead of military action.

According to the NBC / South Korea News poll released early Sunday, 57 percent of American-registered voters say the United States should mostly use diplomacy in dealing with the other nuclear issue.

Most Preferred Diplomats to Military Action on Korean Peninsula Nuclear Issue: Poll

WASHINGTON -- As the Russian President arrives on Monday to discuss the standoff with the Korean Peninsula nuclear issue, a new poll found that a majority of Americans believe the United States should use diplomacy instead of military action.

According to the NBC / South Korea News poll released early Sunday, 57 percent of American-registered voters say the United States should mostly use diplomacy in dealing with the other nuclear issue.

Most Americans prefer diplomacy to military action on Korean Peninsula Nuclear Issue: Poll

Most Preferred Diplomats to Military Action on Korean Peninsula Nuclear Issue: Poll

WASHINGTON -- As the Russian President arrives on Monday to discuss the standoff with the Korean Peninsula nuclear issue, a new poll found that a majority of Americans believe the United States should use diplomacy instead of military action.

According to the NBC / South Korea News poll released early Sunday, 57 percent of American-registered voters say the United States should mostly use diplomacy in dealing with the other nuclear issue.

Most Americans prefer diplomacy to military action on Korean Peninsula Nuclear Issue: Poll

Most Preferred Diplomats to Military Action on Korean Peninsula Nuclear Issue: Poll

WASHINGTON -- As the Russian President arrives on Monday to discuss the standoff with the Korean Peninsula nuclear issue, a new poll found that a majority of Americans believe the United States should use diplomacy instead of military action.

According to the NBC / South Korea News poll released early Sunday, 57 percent of American-registered voters say the United States should mostly use diplomacy in dealing with the other nuclear issue.

Most Americans prefer diplomacy to military action on Korean Peninsula Nuclear Issue: Poll

Most Preferred Diplomats to Military Action on Korean Peninsula Nuclear Issue: Poll

WASHINGTON -- As the Russian President arrives on Monday to discuss the standoff with the Korean Peninsula nuclear issue, a new poll found that a majority of Americans believe the United States should use diplomacy instead of military action.

According to the NBC / South Korea News poll released early Sunday, 57 percent of American-registered voters say the United States should mostly use diplomacy in dealing with the other nuclear issue.

Most Americans prefer diplomacy to military action on Korean Peninsula Nuclear Issue: Poll

Most Preferred Diplomats to Military Action on Korean Peninsula Nuclear Issue: Poll

WASHINGTON -- As the Russian President arrives on Monday to discuss the standoff with the Korean Peninsula nuclear issue, a new poll found that a majority of Americans believe the United States should use diplomacy instead of military action.

According to the NBC / South Korea News poll released early Sunday, 57 percent of American-registered voters say the United States should mostly use diplomacy in dealing with the other nuclear issue.