President Donald Trump on Tuesday told war veterans the US was making progress in Afghanistan after the removal of unnecessary restraints on soldiers.

As Kabul meets benchmarks, EU approves €98 million

WASHINGTON - "We've removed unnecessary restraints on our war fighters in Afghanistan. Those who risk their life and limb for our country deserve rules of engagement that give them the best opportunity to finally defeat the enemy," Trump said.

In Afghanistan (UNAMA) said "UNAMA is pleased to announce that the third joint board meeting to support the upcoming parliamentary and district council elections, a new agreement was signed to enable enhanced contributions to Afghanistan's electoral budget," the statement said.

According to preliminary data, more than 8 million Afghans, including more than three million women, have registered to vote in this year's parliamentary and district council elections, and for the 2019 presidential elections.

"While we continue to support the progress made so far, we are following developments closely," said.
