New elections for the Parliament and District council elections are due in its current term and the results of these elections will be the reality. There are around 9 million voters registered so far, with almost 3 million women voters. International community has expressed its full confidence in Afghan elections. UNAMA has called on Afghan parties to support the election process and not in accordance with the fundamentals of the democratic principles of the people of Afghanistan. SRGC on UNAMA Yaromato Tanaka said as quotation that, “It’s very likely to be skeptical, but I think we should take this very seriously... We should respect this desire of the people.” On the same day, UN Security Council called on all the stakeholders to do everything to create the conditions for credible and transparent elections.

International community has expressed full faith in the demonstrative capabilities and competences of the Independent Election Commission (IEC) and Independent Election Commission (BEC) for this election process with appropriate responses to constructive criticism and donors pledged to fund Afghan elections. The elections were held on 3 July in the election building in 3rd project board meeting. International community is supporting Afghanistan with high expectations, as credible and transparent election will have the trust of Afghans in democracy and Afghan institutions, which are needed to provide inclusive, peace security and development.

At the same time, the country is also gearing for the election process and the political landscape is taking shape. Its dynamics are changing. Alliances are broken, new alliances are formed and this process of breaking and forming alliances will continue even after elections. First Vice President Dostum is back to the country and he was welcomed by the Second Vice President Sarwar Danish and National Security Advisor. With his return, the demonstrations in north provinces got dissipated and another new alliance, National Salvation Alliance, started taking momentum with its first open meeting and political conference held by him. A Taliban spokesman Noor Mqelq and Mojaqan also announced that they also aimed to work for, in the near future, Afghan elections. Everyone has been given a call for the transparency and credibility of the election process. As Afghan government, politics and the people of Afghanistan, Independent Election Commission (IEC) of Afghanistan, is determined to ensure smooth, transparent, honest and credible election.
