The Taliban failed to gear up sufficiently for the winter security forces conducted operations in the last two months, Brig. Gen. Khanullah Shujah, the interior ministry spokesman, said. Security forces continued their military operations last winter and cut off Taliban logistic supply to Pakitan. He said fighting and attacks at public places had sparked tensions and cracks within the Taliban at both low and high levels.

"The Taliban failed to gear up for the winter and the security forces conducted operations," he said.

In addition, the Taliban witnessed opposition from many common people in most of the places and they did observe all this. Pakita Police Chief Col. Mohammad Umar Janbaz said the security situation was totally different this year compared to the previous year when the Taliban coordination and cooperation among security forces and people was not in any condition.

Common people also believe that security situation in Pakita has improved last year and this year and this could be a "Millennium" in Pakita.
