literacy and from 82% in 2001 to 93% in 2011. The Afghan government has been working to improve education, but challenges remain.

The Afghan government has been trying to improve the economy, but progress has been slow. Foreign aid has been crucial in funding various projects, but it is estimated that only 10% of the funds actually go to Afghan citizens. Corruption is widespread and many aid projects have been misused.

The government has also faced challenges in maintaining security. The Taliban, along with other insurgent groups, continue to have a strong presence in many parts of the country.

In conclusion, while there have been some positive developments in Afghanistan, there are still many challenges that need to be addressed in order to achieve peace, stability, and economic development. The international community has a role to play in supporting the Afghan government and working towards a better future for the Afghan people.
