KABUL - Lawmakers have established a task team to investigate the rising threat of Daesh in the eastern provinces.

Lawmakers in parliament on Wednesday raised the alarm over what they called an increase in Daesh activities in some strategic eastern prov- inces of the country.

As such they called on the Af- ghan government to be vig- iant regarding threats by mili- tant groups and to secure the area against insurgents.

MPs warned that there would be a public backlash should government fail to tackle the group. However some MPs turned the group as a project alleging that there was the possibility that some elements were involved in hacking the group in the country.
