Uzbekistan: Cooperation for Peace, Stability and Progress
By Vladimir Norov

Uzbekistan is chairing the Shanghai Cooperation Organization at present. Active preparations for conducting the meeting of the SCO Council of heads of state and other events on the highest level are underway in Tashkent.

The Shanghai Cooperation Organization (SCO) was established in 2001 with the aim of building a new model of regional cooperation on the principle of partnership, taking into account the unique features of each participating state, to ensure peace, stability and prosperity in the region. The SCO member states are committed to developing a mutually beneficial trade partnership, maintaining regional security, supporting and stimulating direct contacts between enterprises, encouraging the participation of civil society in expanding the SCO's activity.

The SCO is a trans-regional organization that has the right to those states that have a common interest in the stability and development of the region. The SCO member states are committed to developing a mutually beneficial trade partnership, maintaining regional security, supporting and stimulating direct contacts between enterprises, encouraging the participation of civil society in expanding the SCO's activity. The SCO's main priority is to ensure peace, security, stability and prosperity in the region.

The SCO member states have a common understanding of the threats and challenges they face, and they have committed to working together to address them. The SCO's integration process is based on the principle of non-interference in each other's internal affairs, and the respect for the sovereignty, territorial integrity and independence of other states.

The SCO's cooperation is based on a strong foundation of trust and mutual understanding, and it is rooted in a shared vision of the future. The SCO member states are committed to promoting a new model of regional cooperation, one that is based on mutual respect, trust, equal partnership, and shared responsibility.
