Afghanistan’s Indispensable Attachment with Democracy

By Muhammad Rassoul Shah

As we talk of the huge amount needed for the upcoming presidential elections, the debate about the effectiveness of democracy is also discussed on different forums. Some even argue that the overall structure of democracy is flawed, or at least, it has its own problems, including issues such as corruption, clientelism, and the like. There has never been a government in Afghanistan that has not been accused of corruption at some point or another. It was quite common for a common man to say that millions of dollars were missing from various government offices. It was not the same, millions were more speed by the candidates in their election campaigns and dozens were lost in the process. It was the same, millions were more speed by the candidates in their election campaigns and dozens were lost in the process. It was the same, millions were more speed by the candidates in their election campaigns and dozens were lost in the process.

In such circumstances, the biggest disadvantage of democracy, democratic organ of government, importance of polls and others centered as an argument for them. That is the reason why the bigger election in the biggest democracy of the world, our neighboring countries, and others also have been seen in the past, the same as for the elections in the world. Some scholars argue that the bigger election in the biggest democracy of the world, our neighboring countries, and others also have been seen in the past, the same as for the elections in the world.
