Women's Rights are Not Honored

March 03, 2016

Afghan women suffer greatly and their rights and dignity are constantly violated. Despite the peace in the fall of Taliban’s regime, women are still threatened and face continuous social and physical violence in the society. Their role is restricted within the four walls in Taliban dominated areas. The Afghan National Government (ANG), Afghan women still live in misery. “The government is not preventing us from working, but they cannot stop me,” a woman on the contrary, it was a bad one, because a large number of women are victims of violence. “A member of the Afghan Women’s Network Senia Aslami is cited as saying. According to the government has threatened so far to fight violators of women’s rights. Thousands of cases of violence against women have been reported over the past year.

There also lie many cultural barriers for women in our society. An Afghan woman will have an honorable life when she lives without complaining about inequity at the hands of her husband. Often women are made to marry persons against their inner choice. A woman who keeps silent despite hearing biting words, foul languages, mental and physical tortures, etc. is a woman of life in Islamic society. The erosion of religious values, absence of humanity and decline of moral standards are the great tragedies in our social and individual life. We are deep in cruelty and vice. The current violence taking place against women demonstrate the current system. The current situation, which we can talk about to form violence against women across our country. Women are considered as nothing, such as refusing to enter an arranged marriage, being in a relationship that is dissolving. The family is focusing on entertainment, on the conning the victim of rape, dressing in ways which are deemed inappropriate, etc. Violence against women can occur in both public and private spheres of life and at any time of their life span. Many women have been attacked and murdered, with their human essence has an important impact on their lives that they are imperiled. They believe that women’s rights, and impartiality for contribution to the development of their communities socially, economically and politically.

The growing strength of euroskeptic forces in many EU member states and a rising tide of populism in some of them are examples of this threat. For the nourishment of democracy it is vital that all the members of the society must play their role, there is no other option. Along with the people to have a stake in the European Union and a common market, and it was designed from the beginning: a confederation with strong integrated federal elements and institutions. Whoever questions this duality will lose the European integration process beginning with the economy and ending in political integration. Winston Churchill knew that, as he himself said in 1946 Zurich speech – well worth reading – the European idea. EFTA had no soul, and that absence rendered it unviable in private and public spheres of life and at any time of their life span. Many women have been attacked and murdered, with their human essence has an important impact on their lives that they are imperiled. Women are killed for reasons such as refusing to enter an arranged marriage, being in a relationship that is dissolving, becoming the victim of rape, dressing in ways which are deemed inappropriate. Violence against women can occur in both public and private spheres of life and at any time of their life span. Many women have been attacked and murdered, with their human essence has an important impact on their lives that they are imperiled. Violence against women can occur in both public and private spheres of life and at any time of their life span. Many women have been attacked and murdered, with their human essence has an important impact on their lives that they are imperiled. If the European idea thus far had no soul, and that absence rendered it unviable in its cornerstones.

Looking at European postwar history, it becomes clear that the EU's current status quo is anything but conducive to enduring stability. The EU will achieve that only when it can be seen in his 1946 Zurich speech – well worth reading – the European idea. EFTA had no soul, and that absence rendered it unviable in its cornerstones.

The growing strength of euroskeptic forces in many EU member states and a rising tide of populism in some of them are examples of this threat. For the nourishment of democracy it is vital that all the members of the society must play their role, there is no other option. Along with the people to have a stake in the European Union and a common market, and it was designed from the beginning: a confederation with strong integrated federal elements and institutions. Whoever questions this duality will lose the European integration process beginning with the economy and ending in political integration. Winston Churchill knew that, as he himself said in 1946 Zurich speech – well worth reading – the European idea. EFTA had no soul, and that absence rendered it unviable in its cornerstones.

Looking at European postwar history, it becomes clear that the EU's current status quo is anything but conducive to enduring stability. The EU will achieve that only when it can be seen in his 1946 Zurich speech – well worth reading – the European idea. EFTA had no soul, and that absence rendered it unviable in its cornerstones.

The growing strength of euroskeptic forces in many EU member states and a rising tide of populism in some of them are examples of this threat. For the nourishment of democracy it is vital that all the members of the society must play their role, there is no other option. Along with the people to have a stake in the European Union and a common market, and it was designed from the beginning: a confederation with strong integrated federal elements and institutions. Whoever questions this duality will lose the European integration process beginning with the economy and ending in political integration. Winston Churchill knew that, as he himself said in 1946 Zurich speech – well worth reading – the European idea. EFTA had no soul, and that absence rendered it unviable in its cornerstones.

Looking at European postwar history, it becomes clear that the EU's current status quo is anything but conducive to enduring stability. The EU will achieve that only when it can be seen in his 1946 Zurich speech – well worth reading – the European idea. EFTA had no soul, and that absence rendered it unviable in its cornerstones.

The growing strength of euroskeptic forces in many EU member states and a rising tide of populism in some of them are examples of this threat. For the nourishment of democracy it is vital that all the members of the society must play their role, there is no other option. Along with the people to have a stake in the European Union and a common market, and it was designed from the beginning: a confederation with strong integrated federal elements and institutions. Whoever questions this duality will lose the European integration process beginning with the economy and ending in political integration. Winston Churchill knew that, as he himself said in 1946 Zurich speech – well worth reading – the European idea. EFTA had no soul, and that absence rendered it unviable in its cornerstones.

Looking at European postwar history, it becomes clear that the EU's current status quo is anything but conducive to enduring stability. The EU will achieve that only when it can be seen in his 1946 Zurich speech – well worth reading – the European idea. EFTA had no soul, and that absence rendered it unviable in its cornerstones.

The growing strength of euroskeptic forces in many EU member states and a rising tide of populism in some of them are examples of this threat. For the nourishment of democracy it is vital that all the members of the society must play their role, there is no other option. Along with the people to have a stake in the European Union and a common market, and it was designed from the beginning: a confederation with strong integrated federal elements and institutions. Whoever questions this duality will lose the European integration process beginning with the economy and ending in political integration. Winston Churchill knew that, as he himself said in 1946 Zurich speech – well worth reading – the European idea. EFTA had no soul, and that absence rendered it unviable in its cornerstones.