Disregarding Education Has Made Us Suffer!

By Afsanatギ

The more necessity is than offering the insignificant
ense of my students around the school. They come to school every day, to learn a single digit digit digit digit digit digit digit... I couldn't see these individuals contribute to making a perfect student,
the often trivial contributions of billions of people throughout the history the world that we live in. Similarly, it inspires me to believe that my work, even if small, has contributed to the betterment of this world. Afsanatギ, a teacher at Afsnatギ Aziz Raayat, the chairwoman of New York City on the rise of awards for education in 2014. She is a politician and a humanitarian who has been instrumental in raising public awareness and support for education-related issues. Her commitment to education has been recognized through countless efforts to address the root causes. This is afmended by impoverished economist Nobel Laureate Robert Solow who described the growth of national income as having
three source:
- increases in the stock of capital
- increases in the labor force
- increases in the rate of technology
In his analysis, he emphasized the need for a balanced increase in all three areas to achieve sustainable economic growth. Afsnatギ is a vocal advocate for policies that promote education as a catalyst for social and economic development.
She believes that investing in education is a valuable strategy that can help reduce poverty, promote social mobility, and strengthen democratic institutions.

Increasing Number of Substandard Private Universities

In the heart of the country, there are too many substandard private universities that are thriving. These institutions are profiting from the influx of students who are seeking good-quality education. However, the quality of education at these universities is often compromised. The lack of resources, inadequate facilities, and inexperienced faculty are some of the challenges faced by these institutions.

Afghan Girls – The Victim of Violence

By Hijratullah Zia

The women in Afghanistan are the long-term sufferers to bear the brunt of violence caused by the war. The war has left a generation of Afghan women with no chance to receive a basic education.

The government of Afghanistan has made some efforts to address the issue of violence against women, but these efforts have not been enough to prevent the perpetration of violence. The lack of resources and the absence of political will are some of the reasons why these efforts have not been successful.

For instance, in the Talibān-dominated areas, what kind of schools are now being run? Is there a serious effort to make these schools safe and accessible for girls? Is there a commitment to provide quality education in these schools?

Additionally, the situation in Afghanistan has also been complicated by the presence of armed groups, who often use violence as a means of intimidation and control. This has made it difficult for women to access education and exercise their rights.

It is imperative to address the issue of violence against women in Afghanistan. The government and international organizations must work together to ensure that women have access to education and the protection they need to live in safety.

In the Name of God, the Most Merciful, the Most Kind

March 04, 2015

Chairman / Editor in Chief: Dr. Hussain Yasa
Vice Chairman: Kazim Ali Gulzary
Address: V/137 Street, 6 Phase, Shahr-e-Omar, Kabul
No: Office: Street 6, Darast, Kabul, Afghanistan

Afghanistan is the poorest country in the world. It is a country that has been ravaged by war for decades. The country is facing many challenges, including poverty, unemployment, and lack of access to education. The situation for women in Afghanistan is particularly dire.

Afghanistan is a country of great diversity, with a rich cultural heritage. However, this diversity has been overshadowed by conflict and violence. The impact of war on the country is evident in the high levels of poverty and unemployment. Afghanistan is also grappling with issues such as corruption and lack of accountability, which undermine the country's development efforts.

The young people of Afghanistan have been particularly affected by the war. They have grown up in a world of violence and conflict, and many have lost their parents or siblings. This has had a profound impact on their lives and their ability to achieve their full potential.

The war has had a devastating impact on the country's education system. Many schools have been destroyed or damaged, and teachers and students have been displaced. This has led to a significant decline in the quality of education. The government and international organizations have made efforts to rebuild the education system, but the task is enormous.

In this context, it is crucial to recognize the importance of education in promoting peace and stability. Education is a powerful tool for social change, and it has the potential to break the cycle of violence.

The government and international organizations must work together to ensure that education is accessible to all Afghan children, regardless of their gender or background. This will require a sustained commitment to provide resources and support for education.

In conclusion, the situation in Afghanistan is complex and challenging. However, it is important to recognize the resilience and determination of the Afghan people. They have shown that they are willing to work towards a better future for their country. The international community must support these efforts, and work together to create a better future for Afghanistan.

Disregarding Education Has Made Us Suffer!

By Afsanatギ

The more necessity is than offering the insignificant
ense of my students around the school. They come to school every day, to learn a single digit digit digit digit digit digit digit... I couldn't see these individuals contribute to making a perfect student,
the often trivial contributions of billions of people throughout the history the world that we live in. Similarly, it inspires me to believe that my work, even if small, has contributed to the betterment of this world. Afsanatギ, a teacher at Afsnatギ Aziz Raayat, the chairwoman of New York City on the rise of awards for education in 2014. She is a politician and a humanitarian who has been instrumental in raising public awareness and support for education-related issues. Her commitment to education has been recognized through countless efforts to address the root causes. This is afmended by impoverished economist Nobel Laureate Robert Solow who described the growth of national income as having
three source:
- increases in the stock of capital
- increases in the labor force
- increases in the rate of technology
In his analysis, he emphasized the need for a balanced
increase in all three areas to achieve sustainable economic growth. Afsanatギ is a vocal advocate for policies that promote education as a catalyst for social and economic development.
She believes that investing in education is a valuable
strategy that can help reduce poverty, promote social mobility, and strengthen democratic institutions.

Increasing Number of Substandard Private Universities

In the heart of the country, there are too many substandard
private universities that are thriving. These institutions
are profiting from the influx of students who are seeking good-quality education. However, the quality of education at these universities is often compromised. The lack of resources, inadequate facilities, and inexperienced faculty are some of the challenges faced by these institutions.

Afghan Girls – The Victim of Violence

By Hijratullah Zia

The women in Afghanistan are the long-term sufferers to bear the brunt of violence caused by the war. The war has left a generation of Afghan women with no chance to receive a basic education.

The government of Afghanistan has made some efforts to address the issue of violence against women, but these efforts have not been enough to prevent the perpetration of violence. The lack of resources and the absence of political will are some of the reasons why these efforts have not been successful.

For instance, in the Talibān-dominated areas, what kind of schools are now being run? Is there a serious effort to make these schools safe and accessible for girls? Is there a commitment to provide quality education in these schools?

Additionally, the situation in Afghanistan has also been complicated by the presence of armed groups, who often use violence as a means of intimidation and control. This has made it difficult for women to access education and exercise their rights.

It is imperative to address the issue of violence against women in Afghanistan. The government and international organizations must work together to ensure that women have access to education and the protection they need to live in safety.

In the Name of God, the Most Merciful, the Most Kind

March 04, 2015

Chairman / Editor in Chief: Dr. Hussain Yasa
Vice Chairman: Kazim Ali Gulzary
Address: V/137 Street, 6 Phase, Shahr-e-Omar, Kabul
No: Office: Street 6, Darast, Kabul, Afghanistan

Afghanistan is the poorest country in the world. It is a country of great diversity, with a rich cultural heritage. However, this diversity has been overshadowed by conflict and violence. The impact of war on the country is evident in the high levels of poverty and unemployment. Afghanistan is also grappling with issues such as corruption and lack of accountability, which undermine the country's development efforts.

The young people of Afghanistan have been particularly affected by the war. They have grown up in a world of violence and conflict, and many have lost their parents or siblings. This has had a profound impact on their lives and their ability to achieve their full potential.

The war has had a devastating impact on the country's education system. Many schools have been destroyed or damaged, and teachers and students have been displaced. This has led to a significant decline in the quality of education. The government and international organizations have made efforts to rebuild the education system, but the task is enormous.

In this context, it is crucial to recognize the importance of education in promoting peace and stability. Education is a powerful tool for social change, and it has the potential to break the cycle of violence.

The government and international organizations must work together to ensure that education is accessible to all Afghan children, regardless of their gender or background. This will require a sustained commitment to provide resources and support for education.

In conclusion, the situation in Afghanistan is complex and challenging. However, it is important to recognize the resilience and determination of the Afghan people. They have shown that they are willing to work towards a better future for their country. The international community must support these efforts, and work together to create a better future for Afghanistan.