Renewing Europe

By Emmanuel Macron

N

ever since World War II, Europe has been as essential as it ever has. Yet never has Europe been in so much danger. Europe is the symbol of what it means to be civilized, of what it means to be human. After so many years of relative peace, it has been struck to its very core by the presence of a threat that involves not just the future of the whole of Europe, the eurozone, its identity, or its institutions, but the very survival of the continent.

How would we react to the crises of financial capitalism without the euro, which is the core of Europe’s economic identity? Without the euro, how could we imagine the future of Europe, because it is the European civilization that unites, fosters and promotes us? The euro, which is Europe’s most important element, is not just a currency; it is the heart of the continent. It is the euro that makes us want to live together, to see beyond the borders of our own countries.

There is no turning back from this crisis. The euro is not the enemy; it is the key to our survival and prosperity. The euro is the key to our survival and prosperity. The euro is the key to our survival and prosperity. The euro is the key to our survival and prosperity.

Europe is not just a market. It is a project. A market is useful, but it should not be the only goal. We should put our trust in the euro, in the political and institutional framework of Europe, and in the values that the euro embodies.

If we fail to act, we may face a future in which our civilization is threatened. The euro is the symbol of Europe, and Europe is the symbol of our civilization. If we fail to act, we may face a future in which our civilization is threatened. The euro is the symbol of Europe, and Europe is the symbol of our civilization. If we fail to act, we may face a future in which our civilization is threatened. The euro is the symbol of Europe, and Europe is the symbol of our civilization.

But those who would change nothing are also misguided, because they deny the European Council. Hence, resisting the temptation of isolation Europe is not second-rate. Europe in its entirety is a vanguard: it has always been a leader in the areas of science and technology, and it continues to be.

We have to stand firm, proud and lucid, in the face of this manipulation and say that we, as Europeans, are not just a market; we are a community. We are a community.

We must take the lead in this crisis. Europe is not a second-rank power. Europe in its entirety is a vanguard: it has always been a leader in the areas of science and technology, and it continues to be.

We have to stand firm, proud and lucid, in the face of this manipulation and say that we, as Europeans, are not just a market; we are a community. We are a community.

We must take the lead in this crisis. Europe is not a second-rank power. Europe in its entirety is a vanguard: it has always been a leader in the areas of science and technology, and it continues to be.

We have to stand firm, proud and lucid, in the face of this manipulation and say that we, as Europeans, are not just a market; we are a community. We are a community.

We must take the lead in this crisis. Europe is not a second-rank power. Europe in its entirety is a vanguard: it has always been a leader in the areas of science and technology, and it continues to be.

We have to stand firm, proud and lucid, in the face of this manipulation and say that we, as Europeans, are not just a market; we are a community. We are a community.

We must take the lead in this crisis. Europe is not a second-rank power. Europe in its entirety is a vanguard: it has always been a leader in the areas of science and technology, and it continues to be.

We have to stand firm, proud and lucid, in the face of this manipulation and say that we, as Europeans, are not just a market; we are a community. We are a community.

We must take the lead in this crisis. Europe is not a second-rank power. Europe in its entirety is a vanguard: it has always been a leader in the areas of science and technology, and it continues to be.

We have to stand firm, proud and lucid, in the face of this manipulation and say that we, as Europeans, are not just a market; we are a community. We are a community.

We must take the lead in this crisis. Europe is not a second-rank power. Europe in its entirety is a vanguard: it has always been a leader in the areas of science and technology, and it continues to be.

We have to stand firm, proud and lucid, in the face of this manipulation and say that we, as Europeans, are not just a market; we are a community. We are a community.