KARUL - Flash floods, heavy rains and snowfall have killed at least 39 people across Afghanistan during the past two weeks and left thousands homeless, with the southern provinces of Helmand and Kandahar the worst hit, an Afghan official said on Wednesday. Some 9,000 people were displaced in Kandahar alone, the Afghanistan National Disaster Management Authority (ANDMA) said, though a U.N. relief agency said at least 13,500 people in the province had been affected by the calamitous weather. Hashmat Khan Bakhshi, spokesman for ANDMA, said: “The event might continue into the night. No injuries were reported.”
